Greeks topple Cyprus leader

ATHENS (AP) — Greek army officers commanding the Cypriot National Guard have seized control of Cyprus and toppled the government of President Makarios, Radio Cyprus announced today. Reports differed on the fate of Makarios.

Radio Cyprus announced newspaper publisher Nicholas Sampson had been appointed president to succeed Makarios. Sampson publishes the newspaper Machi, meaning combat.

The radio earlier reported that Makarios had been killed but did not repeat this report in announcing the appointment of Sampson.

A Turkish Cypriot radio monitored in Ankara said Makarios had survived the coup and taken refuge with the United Nations force assigned to keep peace between Greeks and Turks on the island.

The Turkish broadcast said Makarios appealed to "all loyal Cypriots to struggle to end the foreign aggression in our homeland." It said he also sought United Nations intervention to halt "unnecessary bloodshed among brothers."

In Greece a military source said the Greece Armed forces had been put in a state of alert, and in Turkey Premier Bulent Ecevit canceled a trip to Turkey's Agean area and called an extraordinary cabinet meeting.

Ecevit declared Turkey "will not let any alien touch the Turkish community's basic rights on the island."

The Greek officers of the National Guard were recently accused by Makarios of supporting the terrorist Eoka-B organization, which seeks to unite Cyprus with Greece.

Union with Greece, or Enosis, had also been an early goal of Makarios, but he gave it up in favor of an independent Cyprus because of bitter opposition to Enosis by the island's large Turkish minority.

Makarios, 60, was the political leader for the island's struggle for independence from Britain in the 1950s and had been president since Cyprus became independent on Aug. 16, 1960. He had been archbishop and head of the Cypriot Orthodox Church since 1950.

Britain's high commissioner to Cyprus, Steven Olver, reported to London that the presidential palace in Nicosia was under attack, but "there is no confirmation on the whereabouts of President Makarios," a spokesman for the British Foreign Office reported.

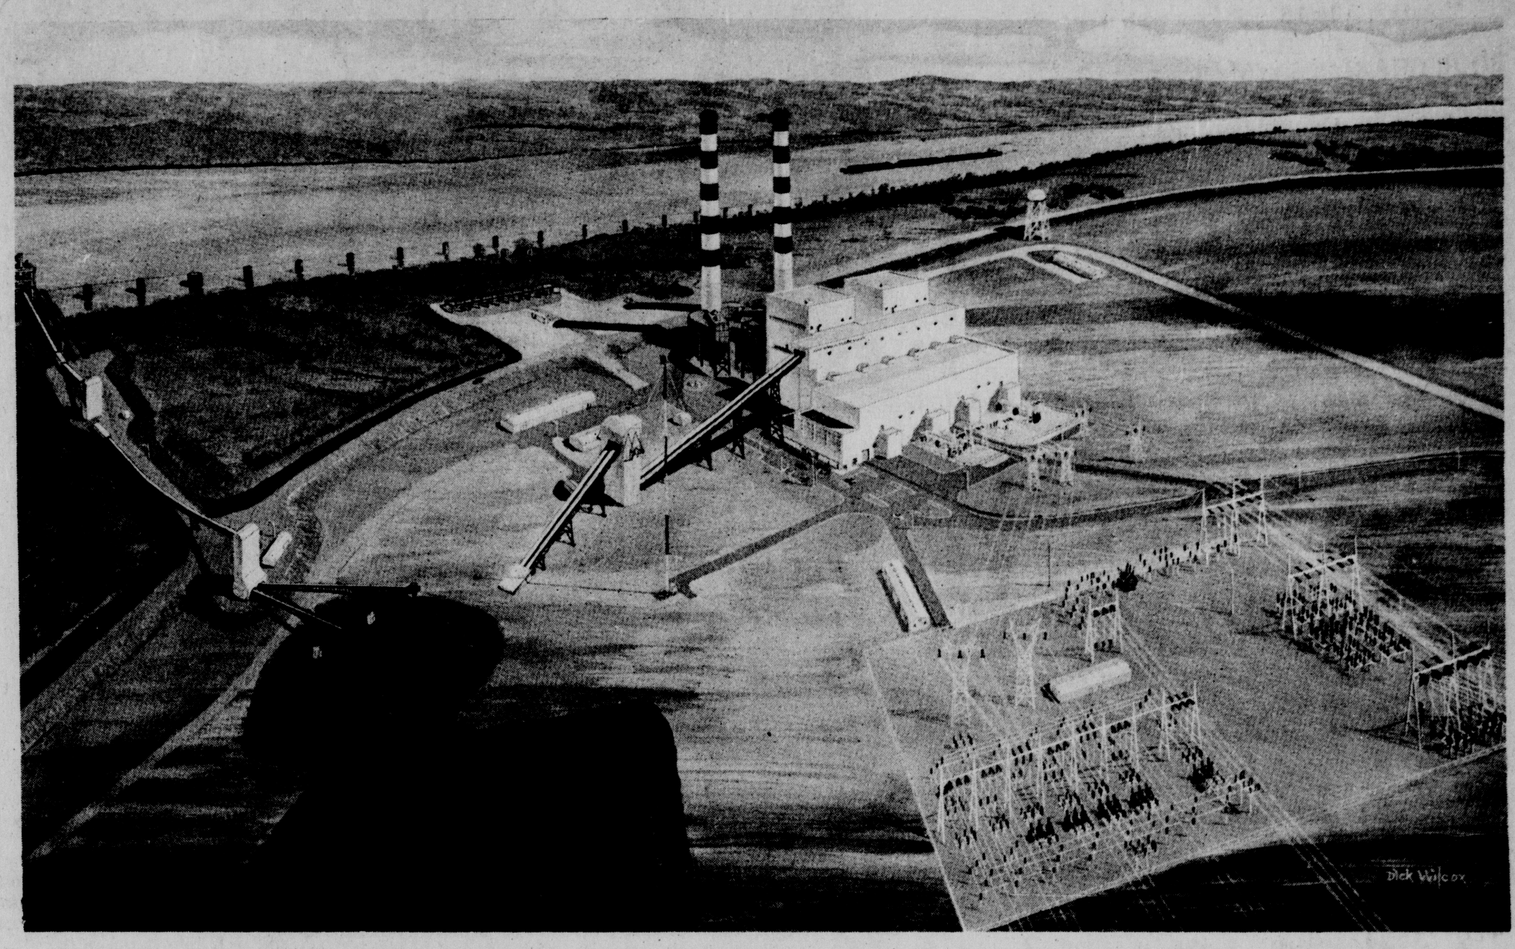
Olver reported that there was fighting in Nicosia, the nation's capital, and in Limassol. He said tanks had surrounded the Nicosia airport, and the rebel forces had taken over Radio Cyprus.

Normal communications with the Mediterranean island off the south coast of Turkey were severed, and the international airport at Nicosia was closed.

A communique broadcast by Radio Cyprus said the National Guard — the Cypriot army of 6,000 troops led by 650 Greek Army officers — had formed a "government of national salvation" and was in "full control of the situation." It said elections "for a genuinely freely elected government will be held within a year, no later."

It said Makarios was "already dead" and that anyone resisting the army would be "shot on the spot." It added that a curfew had been imposed and no civilians or vehicles other than ambulances were allowed on the streets.

Basic objectives were then listed, including "The continuation of formalities for the solution of the Cyprus problem through the intercommunal talks... The declaration of free elections as soon as the necessary preconditions are established, and, within a year, no later. ...Foreign policy will not be changed in any way. Friendly relations with other countries will be maintained..."



Generating unit to begin service in 1977

Associated Electric located in St. Jude Industrial Park near Marston, the generating and transmitting cooperative which supplies power for Noranda Aluminum Inc. is now constructing a second generating unit expected to go into service during the summer of 1977. An artist's conception of the completed rural electric cooperative, the largest known, illustrates the size of the plant upon completion. One of the 600 foot stacks near the plant, center, which principally emits water vapor, will not be included in the construction. The unit is being built by Blount Bros. Construction Co. of Montgomery, Ala.

1 killed and 18 injured in weekend mishaps

A 4 - year - old Corning, Ark., girl was fatally injured and 18 persons were injured in seven traffic accidents in the Bootheel area over the weekend, according to the highway patrol.

The fatality brings the number of traffic deaths in Southeast Missouri to 57 for the year compared with 58 persons killed in traffic accidents at this same time last year.

Gina Briney died at 8:50 p.m. Sunday in Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff of injuries received in a traffic accident two hours earlier on Highway 67 one mile south of Neelyville.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Bruce Edward Carlisle, 21, of Benton, Ark., made a left turn into oncoming traffic and was struck by a car driven north by the child's father, Donnie Ray Briney Sr., 33, of Corning, Ark.

Briney received minor injuries and his wife, Diane Briney, 30, and sons Donald Ray Briney Jr., 13 and John D. Briney, 11, suffered serious injuries. They were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Carlisle and passengers, Richard Perkins, 21, of Blakely, Ark., Tim Wommack, 21, of Camden, Ark., and Donald Lynn White, 21, of Benton, Ark., received minor injuries and were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Earl Baker, 47, of Sylvia was seriously injured at 6:30 p.m. Friday one mile south of Sylvia on Highway 67 when he lost control of his northbound car which slid across the highway down an embankment.

He was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Three persons were injured, two seriously, in a traffic accident at 12:05 a.m. Saturday on Highway 162 in Portageville when a southbound car driven by Arthur Muse Jr., 16, of Portageville failed to yield the right of way and was struck in the right side by a pickup truck driven east by Wesley Strickland, 54, of Lilbourn.

Strickland and a passenger, Terry Hunt, 15, of Portageville were seriously injured. Gail Cayton, 14, of Portageville, a passenger in the Muse auto, suffered

Thieves get $1,688 in goods

Burglars took items valued at $1,688 from the Grace Powell home, 527 Delmar St., between 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Saturday, according to police.

Police said a large number of items were taken from the house. Thieves apparently entered the house through a side door, police reported.

Burglars broke into Deal's Used Furniture, 865 W. Malone Ave., sometime Sunday and stole $45 worth merchandise, police said.

Taken were a guitar worth $50, a black tape box and an unknown number of tapes worth $45, according to police. Police said burglars got into the building through a rear window.

Pope Hunt, 1030 N. Ranney St., told police a gold diamond ring valued at $350 to $400 was lost or stolen between 2:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday at the Jaycee Swimming Pool.

Hunt told police he had a lifeguard put the ring in a basket for safekeeping with items belonging to other people. When he went to retrieve the ring, it was gone, he said.

No injury in 2-car accident

Four people escaped injury shortly after 9 a.m. today in a two- car accident two miles south of Bertrand on Route B. The accident occurred when a car driven by Mrs. Louise McClanahan of Bertrand pulled out of a side road, shown here, into the path of a car driven by Jerry Morris of East Prairie.The car in the foreground belongs to Morris. Mrs. McClanahan said the corn in the field blocked her view. She had two passengers in her car. (Daily Standard photo)

Consumers spending at high level locally

How are residents of Scott County using the bigger incomes they are now receiving? How much of it are they spending per year in local retail stores?

According to figures for the past year, which have just become available through a new market study, consumer outlays for goods and services were at a high level locally. To a great extent, however, it was a reflection of higher prices.

The findings are contained in a survey made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It shows how the average family in each part of the country has been spending its money and how much of it has been going for food, clothing, household equipment, cars and other articles.

In Scott County, food was a major item. Approximately 17 cents of every dollar was spent in the area's supermarkets, butcher shops, bakeries, grocery stores, delicatessens and the like.

The report shows that expenditures in local food stores in the year came to $14,597,000, as compared with the previous year's total of $13,277,000.

This was solely for food bought for home consumption. Not included was the sum spent in restaurants, at lunch counters and in other dine and drink places.

If the outlay for take-home food were to be divided equally among all local families, each of them would have a bill of $1,282 for the year.

Elsewhere in the central states, the average was $1,270 per family.

The figures for other retail lines also indicate relatively strong consumer buying locally.

Outlets for cars, motorcycles, trailers, boats and other automotive equipment had receipts totaling $21,295,000, as against the previous year's $18,087,000.

Sales of general merchandise, in variety and department stores, came to $5,013,000. In 1972 it was $4,391,000.

Stores carrying coats, dresses, shoes, hats and other wearing apparel reported a sales volume of $3,884,000, compared with the prior $3,551,000.

Furniture stores, including those selling home furnishings and appliances, accounted for $3,642,000. Their total, a year earlier, was $3,075,000.

Largest electric co-op in the works

MARSTON – Associated Electric, the generating and transmitting "super" cooperative located in St. Jude Industrial Park near here and the supplier of power for Noranda Aluminum Inc., is now constructing a second generating unit expected to go into service during the summer of 1977.

Associated Electric is one of a network of six cooperatives within the boundaries of Missouri which has a nationwide system. The company has approximately 220 miles of 345,000 volt lines which tie into a system connecting Tulsa, Okla., Kansas City, St. Louis and Minneapolis - St. Paul, Minn. Associated provides service for 40 of the 41 electric cooperatives in Iowa and has the ability to exchange emergency energy, economy energy, short-term power and other types of power.

The activities of Associated are directed from Springfield, including the electrical supply operations. A modern energy control center, equipped with a digitial computer, effects operational economics and provides continous analysis of the security of the transmitting system.

The new unit will be of the same capacity as the present generating plant, a 600,000 kilowatt unit with a maximum capability of 672,000 kilowatts. The twin unit will have transmitting lines approximately 300 miles long and when both units are complete, the 1,200,000 kilowatt plant will be the largest electric cooperative known.

The new generating unit under construction required the largest loan program ever put together by rural electric cooperatives. The plant and transmission lines loans amount to $240 million.

Unite one is located on a 200 acre site with approximately 100 full time employes. Approximately 300 construction personnel are employed at unit two but employment will peak to 900 persons.

Unit two is being constructed by Blount Bros. Construction Co. of Montgomery, Ala.

Charles Price of Malden is plant superintendent.

THE UNITED BROTHERHOOD OF HONEY DIPPERS, SEAT HOLE CUTTERS, PRIVY BUILDERS AND HELPERS. O.U.K: B.V.D.

This story relates to an organization in the country of Acirema years before the rapid trend to new inventions had started.

This brotherhood was not only quite militant but also exclusive. No ordinary worker was usually accepted and most of the members were descendants of a long line of honey dippers, the trade being handed down from father to son. Acirema had many zany laws. It was unlawful for a group of businessmen to organize in order that they might gig their customers, but it was perfectly legal for workers to do so. While the privy builders, strictly speaking, were businessmen, if they considered themselves as workers by combining with their employees they could get exemption from this law of monopoly.

The brotherhood, in addition to a high wage, had also been able to coerce many added benefits for themselves such as extra- long paid vacations; multiple pay for work after hours, week-ends, and holidays; large pensions when they thought they were old enough to stop working. In fact, as the saying went "You had it made when you joined the Honey Dippers."

As the organization would not permit any privies in all Acirema to be either built or serviced by other than its members, their wage rates and earnings became the highest of any craftsmen in the land. Not only were they able to get a high wage, but had added benefits that were not subject to income taxes and they were known as "welfare." Welfare was not to benefit the outhouse owner who made it, but a super payment to the honey dippers. At first the owner of every privy had to pay a fee of a few centoras into this welfare fund for every bushel of waste removed. The fee was increased until it amounted to several goldoras (ACIREMA money) and was actually greater than the wage itself.

The high cost of Outhousery was irritating the people and in trying to solve the problem indoor plumbing was proposed as a solution. To try and stop this "new fangled" idea, the brotherhood brought out high- powered public relation talent to try to deride it. Statements were publicized such as "who would want either to eat or to sleep in the same building with their sanitary facilities?" In fact, those who tried this first were made to feel so small they could crawl thru the hole in the doughnut the atoms had for breakfast. But ridicule could not compete with the apparent advantages of the new system. Those who had it soon realized the convenience of not having to go outside in snow, rain, and bad weather or in the middle of the night, with perhaps some prying neighbor looking to see just what type of rainment you might wear at this time of day, the type people did not see on the wash line. It was also hard on those who liked to sleep in the "raw" but felt compelled to dress for these nocturnal excursions.

Just as the buggy whip makers had at first laughed at the horseless carriage and believed the horse was irreplaceable until finally replaced with horsepower, the brotherhood made the same mistake, and indoor plumbing with the advent of larger towns and beginning of cities took more and more of the business. Work was becoming harder and harder to find and the ranks of the unemployed brethren became larger and larger. At this time some of the politically minded officials, seeking their votes, conceived the idea that, as the honey dippers were willing to work but it was not available, they should be paid longer and longer at taxpayers' expense for not working. This was known as workless recompense.

To try to stimulate this business a subsidy was proposed for those still willing to build outhouses. It would pay part of the cost outright and lend the rest at low interest. The subsidy depended on the number of seats in the privy and also whether a conventional or the more expensive key- hole design was used.

When this did not produce the desired results, a retaining program at taxpayers' expense was inaugurated. But this brought serious objections from the workers. Many complained they had spent years in learning to advance from a honey dipper to a seat-hole cutter. Why should a man have to learn another trade and, on top of this, hadn't some of those workers actually gone to school for an entire eight years before even starting to work? Just how much could you in this modern age expect a person to do in order to make a living? Didn't people realize just how difficult it was to master the use of a coping or scroll saw and proper use of a plane and sand paper to smooth the edges so people would not get splinters? Why, hadn't one of their members made the startling invention of the key hole, which had become the mark of status used by all the affluent citizens of Acirema in their outhouses?

But unemployment payments, subsidies, their welfare fund, retraining programs were of no avail and finally the trade and profession completely died out. The welfare plan gradually faded away as its bank account became depleted paying out benefits. The sale of various property acquired under the plan did not bring enough goldoras to fill the need. The hammer, saw, and nail appliers were replaced by a new line of craftsmen - ones using the wrench, blow torch, lead, iron, and copper pipe. The skill of cutting a key hole was replaced by that of wiping a joint, caulking a flange, and cutting a thread.

Sufficient time has not passed so "history" can assess whether the indoor- plumbing craftsmen had enough foresight to keep from duplicating the mistakes of their predecessors. Or the people of Acirema enough intelligence to keep them from doing so. Maybe costs of indoor plumbing finally would become so high that new methods and inventions would someday also be sought. And would chemistry, the science of the atom, or some as yet unknown inventive genius arise to protect the Aciremans from the self- seeking of this new trade?

But there were still a few folks around who reminisced about the old days, and when they went to some far- off places they even found remnants of this bygone art.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

While AFL-CIO President George Meany doesn't apologize for the slogan, "veto-proof Congress," which has caused criticism of its inference, he insists it simply means majority rule rather than a rubber stamp for labor's wishes.

To further back up this reaction to labor leaders' power, the new survey by Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, N. J., reports that some 70 per cent of the American voting- age public (that's 95 million people) favor voluntary unionism, favor curbs on union political spending and think union officials already have far too much power. The study, recently released in Washington, shows that:

--By a margin nearly four- to - one (70 per cent versus 19 per cent) Americans think there is "too much power concentrated in the hands of labor leaders of the big unions in this country."

--By a margin of more than six-to-one (79 per cent versus 12 per cent) Americans feel union officials should not be permitted to use compulsory union dues and fees "to campaign for political candidates." Significantly, 78 per cent of all union members share this view. Pending campaign reform legislation does not outlaw the use of compulsory union dues for politics.

--By a margin of more than two- to - one (68 per cent versus 27 per cent) American voters feel every citizen should be able to "hold a job whether or not he belongs to a union."

Federal labor law endorses and promotes compulsory unionism, but gives individual states the option to ban such arrangements.

While the margins in favor of voluntarism in the 1974 ORC survey are larger than ever, this raises a disturbing question: If the American people favor voluntary unionism and want Congress to curb union political spending abuses, why do the federal lawmakers refuse? Why, in fact, are they on the verge of enacting a one-sided "campaign reform" bill that will curb the political influence of every special interest group except the bosses of Big Labor?

The failure of Congress to act on legislation curbing the abuses of power by union officials is an example of a small but powerful minority -- the officials of Big Labor -- dictating terms to the very men and women who are elected to represent all Americans. No wonder that many Americans have lost faith in their government.

Isn't it time for a change?

SEWERS GO DOWN THE DRAIN?

Only those who have never been there was nostalgic over the kerosene- lamp and outhouse days when every home was pretty much self-contained and self- sufficient. But we may be heading toward something reminiscent of that kind of individual family independence as our demands for energy and other amenities begin to strain the ability of public utilities to meet them.

In many areas, new developments have been stalled because of the lack of sewer tie-ins and treatment plants. An article in PUD (Planned Unit Development) Review, published in Reston, Va., predicts that in the not distant future, we have to be largely a "sewerless" society.

The technology exists today to provide, at feasible cost, human waste disposal systems within single- family or multi- family structures.

One of the most promising is a self- contained system developed in Sweden. The Multrum unit requires no energy and produces no pollutants. Waste is "composted" in a sealed container in the basement, and after two years the sterile residue is simply removed to the garden.

A sewerless society would not only greatly reduce the pollution of lakes and streams, but according to one estimate would mean a 45 per cent reduction in the consumption of purified water used to flush toilets.

Another expert predicts that by 1980, solar- powered home air- conditioning units will be commonplace. The growing use of air conditioners is one of the major causes of the electrical "brown-outs" some cities have experienced in recent summers.

These are signs and portents, suggesting that when we talk about the nation becoming energy- independent, we are talking about more than immunity from foreign oil embargoes.

ENERGY IS LIFE

Alaska has estimated undeveloped reserves of natural gas of over 325 trillion cubic feet. The contribution this vast reservoir of natural gas can make toward easing the threat of a genuine energy shortage in the lower 48 states is crucial. But oil and gas production go together. "... it is impossible", says an American Gas Association official, "to produce the gas without first producing the oil. And the only economical way to produce the oil is to have the pipeline to transport it to the southern coast of Alaska, where it can be shipped to markets."

The imperative of developing new gas supplies was emphasized by an A.G.A. spokesman when he said, "Natural gas is more popular than ever, yet the increase in gas sales during 1971 was the smallest since World War II. This is largely because new supplies of gas are not being developed fast enough to meet rapidly increasing demands." Two changes are needed. In the first place, those concerned with the environment must recognize that natural gas, one of the "clean" sources of energy, is an important factor in pollution abatement. Secondly, no time can be wasted in providing necessary incentives for producers to speed the exploration required to step up development of tremendous gas reserves yet to be discovered in the U. S. -- reserves that are said to total more than 1,100 trillion cubic feet -- including those in Alaska.

One hard fact to which everyone must soon awaken is that energy is life despite all academic arguments to the contrary. Therefore, the question of adequacy of energy supplies has become a personal problem to which each citizen must address himself with increasing concern.

IS NO NEWS BETTER THAN BAD NEWS?

Ten years ago, in a unanimous decision, the U. S. Supreme Court enunciated a doctrine which in the view of some critics, granted virtual immunity from the libel laws to newspapers.

The court ruled that a public official could not recover damages for defamatory statements about his official conduct unless it could be proved that they were made with actual malice or with the knowledge that they were false or with "reckless disregard" for their truth or falsity.

Today, journalists are concerned that this right of "uninhibited, robust and wide-open" debate on public issues, to use the words of Associate Justice William J. Brennan, is in danger of being nibbled away by a less liberal bench.

The Supreme Court has agreed to review a case arising under a Florida law which requires newspapers to print rebuttals from people about whom they published adverse stories or comments. The fear s that, should the Florida statute be upheld, it would encourage similar laws in other states, or possibly a federal "right to reply" law which the Nixon administration intends to submit to Congress.

Even should all this come true, however, the press would still have one option that those who believe it needs "curbing" or who tend to blame it for the bad news it reports, might bear in mind.

That kind of self- imposed news boycott by editors will never happen, of course. It would be damaging to the integrity of the press as it would be the public interest.

But if the public really wants a press that plays it safe — that asks, "How will this story or this editorial affect us?" rather than, "Do the people have a right to this information" — that could be what it ends up with.

MORE U.S. AID FOR THE SOVIET UNION?

One of the most important issues being debated in this session of Congress is -the extent to which the Administration will be allowed to continue its policy of aid and trade with Soviet Russia. Several Congressmen have introduced legislation to curb this aid which has so endangered our national security.

The Kremlin has asked Boeing, Lockheed and McDonnell- Douglas, the only three companies in the world that produce long- range, wide-bodies jets, to collaborate in the construction of a huge aircraft factory for the Soviet Union.

The aircraft produced would be 60 percent faster, carry 25 percent more, and fly 20 percent farther than the 747 jet. This one plant would produce as many jumbo jets as are produced in all U.S. plants put together.

The U.S. has also been supplying computer technology to the Soviets. A collaboration between U.S. computer companies and the Soviet Union to build ultra-modern, high- speed computers is now in the offing. This computer technology would not only move the Soviets ten years into the future, but also enormously upgrade their military across the board. Our citizens should support all Congressional efforts to stop such aid for our sworn enemy. HLH

JACK ANDERSON SAYS

Colson on Tape

WASHINGTON — In an ironic twist, the White House's high priest of snoopery, Charles Colson, was himself recently bugged as he uttered some of the Watergate scandal's most indiscreet confessions.

Colson, when he was the top White House hatchet man, was fond of flipping a switch and tape recording friends and enemies alike. A few days before he went to prison for obstructing justice, however, he was secretly recorded as he bared his soul to Washington businessman and sometime private eye Richard Bast.

Colson had come to Bast to interest him in investigating the Central Intelligence Agency which Colson felt had set him up for all his troubles with federal prosecutors. We have now heard the taped conversations.

The White House tapes were marred by the clatter of cups, the shuffling of paper and the President whistling jocular tunes. Bast's hidden microphones picked up the buzzing of bees, barking dogs and the clink of glasses filled with Johnnie Walker Black Label.

Unaware of the turning reels, Colson speculated that the Central Intelligence Agency planned a "Seven Days in May" takeover of the government. He also asserted that the Pentagon practiced extortion to keep President Nixon from arresting military men who stole his secrets.

In sometimes hostile, sometimes contrite language, Colson described President Nixon behind his back as being short on "guts." Behind Colson's back, Nixon had been equally critical of Colson, the White House tapes show.

Colson complained to Bast that the President was always on the verge of coming down hard on the CIA. But, Colson groused, Nixon was talked out of it by presidential staff chief Al Haig who feared it would "take down the whole intelligence community."

"That's where I got to be critical of Tricky Dick with this kind of lack of guts here," commented the tough-talking Bast.

Sadly, Colson agreed: "I criticize him along with you. For that reason."

Beside Bast's swimming pool whose fountain made background water music over a "mike" secreted among poolside flowers, the two men discussed how Nixon could rid himself of CIA and military spying on the White House.

"He's got the message," brooded Colson. "And he's thinking about it. He's got a helluva problem ... Nobody understands this ... He can't do it himself." Colson explained that Nixon could not fully trust anyone in the White House to carry out his orders and "he can't just sit in there with a machine gun."

The skeptical Bast asked why Nixon didn't simply order arrests if his National Security Council was being spied on by the military, as recent testimony has confirmed.

"If he tried to do anything about it," sighed Colson, "they would have disclosed a lot of his documents that he was worried about protecting, that they had been stealing ... right from Kissinger's briefcase."

"In other words," replied Bast, "they practiced extortion on him."

"Subtly," agreed Colson.

"And the President let them get away with it?"

"Yeah," the former White House confidant conceded.

As to the CIA, Colson said that one of its former agents, Howard Hunt, while in the White House, was in contact directly or indirectly with CIA clandestine bigwigs.

Colson said he never knew whether the CIA infiltrated the White House "to knock (Nixon) off" -- figuratively speaking -- "or whether they were in their just to spy ..."

"Maybe they were trying to pull something similar to a 'Seven Days in May' deal (a fictional military coup)," suggested Bast.

"Could have been, could have been," mused Colson. "I can't say there was a conspiracy to do it, but I will say that was the practical consequence of their actions."

Nixon's theory, said Colson, was that the CIA were coming in to spy ... Who knows what they want ... The whole house of cards collapsed and maybe that's what they wanted.

"Right now the frightening thing is that there is no one controlling the CIA. I mean nobocy ... Their own files hang them high as a kite."

Colson exictedly rustled a document from his briefcase and said, "Look at this thing." As he described it to the unseen mike and a tape recorder slipped under a mulch bag, it was a note he had written after visiting Senate Watergate cochairman Howard Baker, R-Tenn. Baker had given him quotes from a secret CIA memo.

According to Colson's notes, the CIA memo admitted CIA involvement in some aspects of Watergate. Colson said he had scarcely believed Baker would let him see it. "I thought Howard Baker was drunk," he marveled -- a charge Baker's office hotly dismisses, saying Baker only quoted from the memo while questioning Colson, but did not let him read it.

"Why doesn't Nixon declassify these things?" asked Bast.

Colson explained: "The problem is if he gives this up, how does he justify not giving up other things he doesn't want to give up?" This, of coures, is now the President's dilemma before the Supreme Court.

Another consideration, grumbled Colson, was that Haig (who Colson suspected was with the CIA) had convinced the President not to wreck the CIA just "to save (himself) from impeachment."

"They play it with violins," observed Bast of such White House intrigues.

"People still dance to it," said Colson.

"And here you have the President of the United States dancing to that," replied Bast acidly.

Footnote: Haig told us there was "no way" he was working for the CIA, but refused comment on his talks with Colson. The CIA denies it was spying on the White House. Colson has said that Bast violated a confidence in releasing the tapes. However, the tapes show Colson gave him full permission to speak of their talks, provided it came after Colson's sentencing.

Sinatra and the Socialists: Australian Unions Set World Precedent With Swiftly Triggered Political Strikes

NEW YORK -- I'm sorry Frankie blew his wig in Australia. I've always pitied Sinatra. He was a good newspaper copy boy but turned to crooning. He was a ukelele- picking street ainger in Dockside Hoboken (N.J.) and became a star. And he's been running since -- not so much from us newsmen but from the shadows of the combine: the late mass killer Lucky Luciano; the dead Profacci, a real don of dons in Brooklyn; the bullet-in- the- head vegetable Joe Colombo, Sr.; the self- exiled Chicago syndicate boss Sam (Momo) Giancana; the old Atlantic City hoods and so, so many others. Frankie is a "money- maker," in their lingo, and never will they cease haunting him.

Frankie never should have lost his cool. And as chairman of the Freedom of the Press Committee of the Overseas Press Club, I doth protest the snaring venom he spat at the Aussie press.

But this isn't a psyche-probe into whether Frankie Sinatra fears most his receding hairline or the hoodlums. Scatological though he was in his blasts on newspeople and tube "journalists," there's a far more important story buried in the Melbourne confrontation.

There's a major principle here, wrapped up in what his attorney, Milton Rudin, said after Sinatra was virtually locked in his hotel room by Australian labor leaders.

"We are astounded that the decision of a few union leaders can apparently deprive a man of his living, can stop him leaving a country, or possibly even stop him being fed," averred the counselor.

This riposte came after the militantly raucous Robert Hawke, president of the Australian Council of Trade Unions (similar to the AFL-CIO), announced that Sinatra would "never get out of the country." And Richard Hill, head of the Melbourne Theatrical Employees Union, ordered his members to strike against Sinatra and thus prevent the singer from fulfilling four remaining concert dates down under.

And Mark Windrum, chief of the Melbourne Transport Workers Union, directed his followers not to refuel or load Sinatra's private jet plane unless the "Rat Pack" leader apologized to the Australian press.

Further, the service employes at the Southern Cross Hotel, members of the hotel local there, were told not to serve Sinatra with food and drink nor to clean his suite.

Finally, Jim North, Secretary (leader) of the New South Wales Division, Australian Journalists Association, angrily announced that "if Sinatra doesn't apologize to the media I will call on 114 affiliated unions and ask them to blackball Sinatra unless he apologizes for calling our women journalists whores."

Thus lawyer Rudin was right. Sinatra was being struck and imprisoned for what he said. He was foul- mouthed. But that doesn't give the labor leaders the right to "withdraw their labor" from him professionally. Nor to lock him in Australia.

There's a principle here as big as Sinatra's hysterical mouth. The Australian unions, many of them way out ideologically, translate their political and personal sentiments into trade union action. It is the same Bob Hawke who a year ago called for a worldwide "embargo on transport, goods and communications" if France continued her nuclear bomb testing in the South Pacific.

This was not a call for boycotting of French products. That's the Aussie's privilege. It was, however, a politicalized decision made to prevent a sovereignnation from pursuing its own policies on its own territories over international waters.

Hawke called on the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU), based in Brussels, to unleash similar boycotts of French ships, aircraft and communications. If the ICFTU, a Socialist- oriented world federation, had followed Hawke it could have crippled France for a while.

Hawke did convince 35 Australian unions to boycott the French.

Hawke has not ignored the U.S. His waterfront affiliates threatened, and then actually began action, to tie up American flag ships in protest against Washington's policy in Southeast Asia.

This could have spread. But Teddy Gleason, president of the American International Longshoremen's Assn., got off some counterthreats -- warning that no Australian cargo would be handled in scores of American ports, if the Aussies struck our ships. That ended it.

Hawke has also sounded off against Peking. He protested, and then threatened action, against the mainland Chinese because they set off a nuclear explosion.

Mark well this politicalization of trade unionism. It's characteristic of militant unionism across the world. Be it Sinatra or atomic bomb tests, or aid to Saigon or American multinational corporations, the Hawkes of the international labor world watch them closely. When their feelings are hurt or their own political or philosophical positions are crossed, they yell strike. Yes, indeed, the issue is far bigger than the crooner's mouth.

The fire damaged a large plastic brush measuring three feet by 24 feet, a rubber hose, and the motor used to operate the brush. The fire department was not called to the car wash.

Senate Watergate Committee is dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee, which exposed the dimensions of the nation's greatest political scandal, is dead.

The seven-man panel — officially named the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities — expired over the weekend with the release of its 2,215-page final report detailing "one of America's most tragic happenings."

The mountains of documentary and testimonial evidence collected during the committee's 16 months of active investigation have been stored on computer tape and willed to the panel's principal survivors — the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry and the Special Watergate Prosecution Force.

The aftermath of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate, the committee said, was "characterized by corruption, fraud and abuse of official power."

As preventive medicine, the members unanimously recommended a massive overhaul of federal election laws, creation of a permanent independent prosecutor's office and specific limits on a president's power to violate a citizen's privacy without due process.

Norris injured while working on automobile

Wiley Samuel Norris, 24, of 510 S. Frederick St., Cape Girardeau was struck by an automobile and injured at 6:55 p.m. Saturday at the corner of Greer and Elm streets.

Police said Norris was opening the radiator cap on his automobile when the hot water squirted out and he jumped to get out of the way. He jumped into the path of a car driven by Jo Ann Rodgers, 729 Delmar St.

He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital where he was treated for multiple bruises and released.

Wiley's car was parked on Greer Street and Mrs. Rodgers was westbound on Greer at the time of the accident.

Explorer presidents to meet

The Explorer President Association will meet from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the Holiday Inn to summarize the road rally and plan future activities.

Plans for the President's Association Conference on Exploring scheduled Sept. 20-22 in Kansas City will also be discussed.

Burning trash ignites lumber

CHARLESTON — Firemen were called at 5:30 p.m. Friday to Furniture City on West Marshall Street.

Lumber piled near the rear of the building was ignited by burning trash according to Fire Chief Joe Johnson who said no damage to the building was reported.

At 11:40 a.m. Saturday the fire department was called to the E.B. Drinkwater residence, 314 East Commercial St.

Shingles on the roof of the home which was being re-roofed were ignited from an undetermined source. A small hole was burned in the roof.

Decision on gas rate hike expected soon

JEFFERSON CITY - A hearing before the Missouri Public Service Commission on a request by Arkansas - Missouri Power Co., to raise its rates to residential customers of Associated Natural Gas Co. concluded its third day of testimony July 12.

The request is for an interim rate increase of 17 per cent until the commission can make a determination on a request for a permanent increase. A decision will probably be made in the next two to three weeks, according to Lewis Blanton of Sikeston, who attended the hearing as city attorney for the city of Chaffee.

The cities of Sikeston, Chaffee, Kennett and East Prairie are opposing any increase saying the increases are not needed and the cost of Ark-Mo facilities in Arkansas not attached to Associated Natural Gas such as a liquified natural gas plant, are being passed on to Associated customers.

Frank G. Smith, of Blytheville, Ark. president of Ark-Mo, said the company is having to lay off employes and is not performing some functions it should perform because of lack of revenue.

During the testimony, however, it was said Ark-Mo paid its parent company Middle South Utilities, $1,000,000 in dividends and plans to pay the same amount in 1974.

Ann Landers

Mr. Success is failure in homelife

Dear Ann Landers: You've printed several letters about workaholic husbands. May I add a comment based on many years of experience? I am married to one.

Like those who are driven to excesses in eating and drinking, the person who is driven to overwork may be using his "industriousness" as an excuse to hide from something. In my husband's case, he is hiding from me and his children.

Mr. Success finds it infinitely safer and more comfortable to stay in his structured work role. Members of his immediate family demand something from him in terms of emotional output. At work he doesn't have to be bothered with relating to people in a meaningful way. At the office he can hide behind his mahogany desk and fancy title. This man even avoids social functions because he is so unsure of himself. He is a prominent member of the community, knows a great many people, but he has no friends.

If you look at my husband's bank statements, his stock portfolio, and his performance in the businessworld, he's unquestionably a star, but if you examine his role as a husband and father, he's a dismall failure. I'm not bitter -- I'm just on to him. -- His Wife

Dear Wife: Thanks for a real zinger. And now that you're "on to him", why don't you get on to yourself? You ARE bitter or you could never have written that letter. I'm not suggesting that the man doesn't deserve every word you laid on him, but for your own sake, lady, talk to a counselor and unload some of that hostility and anger. Your husband will never change, which I'm sure you know. My guess is that you have the guy pegged perfectly. So now, get some help for yourself so you can accept, in your guts, his personality defects or make other living arrangements.

Dear Ann Landers: In the past, our criminal justice system has been oriented almost exclusively toward the criminal: law enforcement, apprehension, trial, conviction and, hopefully, rehabilitation. The only thing the innocent victim of a violent crime got out of the system was a trip to a hospital in an ambulance, and the victim had to pay for the ride.

A small but growing group of states has acted to correct this gross injustice. My own state, Washington, now has an excellent program to compensate and assist innocent victims. (So does your state, Illinois.) other states with such programs include Hawaii, Alaska, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts.

These programs cannot be successful, however, if the citizens don't know they exist. Will you help us spread the word by letting your readers know that compensation and assistance may be available to victims of violent crimes, upon application to their state crime victims' compensation board or division? Thank you for passing the word. -- Calvin Winslow, Administrator

Dear Calvin: Your letter has made it possible for 54 million citizens to know these laws exist in some states. Thank you for educating a large segment of our society.

And now may I say a word to my readers who don't know if their state has such laws? Please write to your state representative and ask him. If you don't know the name of your state representative, telephone the public library. The librarian will tell you, if you will give him (or her) your address.

Inform your state representative that you WANT this law passed and be sure to let him know you are a constituent. Nothing is so important to a politician as the people who decide whether or not the remains in office.

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking -- its myths, its realities. Learn the facts by reading, "Booze and You -- For Teen- Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Frank Randol of Glaveston, Tex., spent the weekend in Sikeston.

The Standard wishes to compliment Miss Katherine Clark on her music furnished at the picture show. She gives very pleasing interpretations to all plays thrown on the screen and if Miss Vera Brinkoff should drop in some evening, she would be proud of her understudy.

Sikeston has been in need of a good and convenient tourist camp because we are frequently visited by tourists from all over the country. The Fair Grounds were considered the best and most convenient place in our city. Bath houses, rest rooms and ovens are to be built. A small variety store and soft drink stand are also to be installed for the benefit of the travelers.

What's the law?

The case of the delicate bartender

By: JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Cuddles was a fizzical culturist. She was a lady bartender but, it didn't look like she was going to be one for long. A city ordinance was passed that prohibited females from being bartenders.

Taking up the cudgels, Cuddles sought to protect the prerogatives of her sex by attacking the legality of the ordinance in court.

"It's perfectly valid," insisted a city attorney. "Under it's police power, a city has a duty to protect the health, welfare and morals of its citizens. And, since drinking makes strange bar fellows, passing out the booze is no job for a lady. Simply, she's too tender to be a bartender."

"When I want a knight in shining armor to protect me," retorted Cuddles, "I'll let him know. In the meanwhile, I have the same right to be employed behind a bar in a respectable joint as any man. And to deny me that right is pure discrimination."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you invalidate the ordinance and put Cuddles back behind the bar?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Victorian ideas as to women and their proper place in the scheme of things have changed. In light of current customs and mores, blanket restrictions against female bartendering may no longer be viewed as a necessary and reasonable exercise of police power. If in these enlightened days women can congregate and be served in bars, concluded the judge, in effect, there is no reason to preclude them from serving up the drinks.

(Based upon a 1970 New Jersey Supreme Court Decision)

Crime rate soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crime in the United States soared up 15 per cent during the first three months of this year, the FBI reported today.

It was the second consecutive period reflecting a dramatic increase in the national rate of murder, rape, robbery, assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft — the crime categories measured by the FBI in its Uniform Crime Reports.

The latest crime surge strengthened the pattern forecast by the 16 per cent over-all increase during the last three months of 1973. By contrast, the full-year figures for 1972 showed a 4 per cent decline, the first drop in 17 years, and the figures for the first nine months of 1973 showed the crime rate was holding steady.

The FBI figures, based on statistics reported by state and local police agencies across the country, are not considered totally accurate by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration which has concluded from its own polling that the nation experiences at least twice as much crime as the FBI figures reflect.

The FBI report showed that offenses in all seven crime categories totaled 15 per cent more than in the same period a year ago.

Broken down by categories, the largest increase was 19 per cent for larceny, followed by 15 per cent for burglary and 10 per cent for rape. Murder and assault each rose 7 per cent, auto theft 5 per cent and robbery 1 per cent.

In the brakdown by population, the sharpest increases were in communities of less than 10,000 where the biggest surge was 33 per cent for murder.

Only cities of more than one million showed any significant crime decrease. Taken together, big cities reported an 8 per cent decline in robbery, a 4per cent drop in assault, and a 5 per cent decrease in motor vehicle thefts.

Herschel Bernardi stars at Municipal Opera

ST. LOUIS — A new and spirited dimension of Broadway and television star Herschel Bernardi will be in evidence as he appears in the stage musical production "Man Of La Mancha," which opens July 22 at Municipal Opera. Performances will be presented through July 28 at 8:15 p.m. nightly.

Seats are still available for all performances and may be purchased at the Forest Park box office daily and Sundays from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. and at all Municipal Opera branch ticket offices.

The prize- winning production is a feast for the eyes as well as the ears with some of the most distinguished music and lyrics of our time. Among the celebrated songs are "The Impossible Dream," "Little Bird, Little Bird," "Dulcinea" and the stirring title song. The story, a combination of biography and romance, tells of the Spanish novelist, Miguel de Cervantes y Saavedre, and of the immortal romantic character he created, Don Quixote.

Television viewers will remember Bernardi as police Lt. Jacoby in the series, "Peter Gunn," and in "Arnie". In motion pictures he has had featured roles in such classics as "Love With A Proper Stranger," "Murder By Contract," and "The Savage Eye." He has starred in more than 700 Broadway performances of "Fiddler On The Roof." Television commercial followers will recognize his as the voice of "Charlie The Tuna," and cartoon watchers will recognize his voice as that of the loveable "Fred Flintstone."

Black superstars make movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What happens when black superstars band together to make a film? They are misunderstood, asserts comedian Bill Cosby.

The film is "Uptown Saturday Night," and it stars Sidney Poitier, Cosby, Harry Belafonte, Flip Wilson, Richard Pryor, Calvin Lockhart, Roscoe Lee Browne, Paula Kelly and others.

Poitier put the project together and directed it for First Artists, in which he is a partner with Barbra Streisand, Steve McQueen, Dustin Hoffman and Paul Newman.

"Uptown Saturday Night" opened to excellent business in New York and Chicago, but some of the reviews have been dismaying.

"As black film makers, we are subject to a condition in which things get pushed out of proportion," Cosby observed.

"In the first place, this is not a black film made by blacks for black audiences. We are Americans, and we made the picture to be seen and enjoyed by Americans."

Cosby was especially piqued by criticisms that "Uptown Saturday Night" repeated the old movie stereotype of eye-bugging by black comics.

"The color of the skin of a black man," said the comedian in a pedagogical manner, "gives more prominence to the whiteness of the eyes than does the pinkish tinge of the white man's skin.

"Watch George Segal or Jack Nicholson or Walter Matthau or Jack Lemmon when they are doing comedy and you will note that their eyes do indeed bug out. It is only natural in comedy to open your eyes wider."

"Nobody talks about a 'white movie.' But whenever blacks do a film, the critics ask 'Is it a black movie? Is it real?

State auditor sends claim to federal agency

JEFFERSON CITY – Missouri State Auditor John D. Ashcroft has completed and sent to the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration the audit of the disaster claim submitted by the Chaffee Special Road District in Scott County.

Ashcroft's office, through an agreement between the Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP) and the State of Missouri, is auditing throughout the state as a result of last year's floods and high winds.

The Chaffee Road District submitted a claim of $2,579.01 for expenditures incurred in performing approved work. Ashcroft's audit recommends a reimbursement of $2,488.01 as approved under the guidelines of the Federal - State Disaster Assistance Agreement. However, the audit comments on the additional work performed and recommends that OEP make a final determination of the amount eligible for reimbursement.

OPE retains final review and approval authority, but cannot make reimbursements until the completed work has been audited by Ashcroft's office.

Strikes hit airline and copper industry

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

National Airlines and the copper industry were hit by strikes today, but a tentative settlement was reached in the lengthy walkout by garbagemen and other city employes in Baltimore.

A union spokesman said neogotiators would recommend approval of the offer to 3,000 striking Baltimore employes, some of whom have been off the job since July 1. A separate dispute involving city police remained unsettled with the issue of reprisals the main stumbling block.

The National Airlines strike involved mechanics. In the copper industry, workers walked out on four major producers in a dispute that threatened to involve 30,000 industry employes. Prison guards and other workers picketed a dozen state facilities in Ohio, with employes at some state liquor stores vowing to join the job action.

The dispute between the National Football League Players Association and the NFL Management Council involving players' rights entered its third week with no settlement in sight. The College All-Star game already has been canceled due to the dispute and the next casualty could be the July 27 Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio, which begins the exhibition season.

Able declined to discuss the details of either offer, saying they would first be annnounced to the union membership.

Elsewhere, shipworkers, miners, autoworkers and bus drivers were involved in labor disputes — most of them centered on monetary issues.

Player won't strike

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Veteran linebacker Larry Stallings has refused to honor pickets set up by the National Football League Players Association and has entered the St. Louis Cardinals training camp here.

Stallings, who said he feared some demands made by the association would hamper coaches' and management's efforts to establish team discipline, also said he was reluctant to do anything that might cause problems on the team later.

"I respect the decision reached by my fellow players who decided to honor the strike," Stallings said Sunday, "and I hope they respect my right to do what I felt was proper."

The pickets were set up at the opening of training camp Sunday on the campus of Illinois State University by 15 Cardinal veterans led by player representative Dan Dierdorf. Team officials and Dierdorf agreed that the picketing was peaceful.

Dierforf, who met informally for about an hour with the 44 rookies and free agents at the camp, said he had no direct complaints about the Cardinal management but that he was concerned with the way players were handled in the league.

The player representative said he told the new players that they needed a signed collective bargaining agreement to assure their rights as players and employes.

Americans are jinxed

LYTHAM ST. ANNE'S, England (AP) — This place is not very popular with American golfers. It has one of the most famous seaside courses in the world, but no American has won the British Open Championship here for 48 years.

When Jack Nicklaus failed to catch Gary Player Saturday, and the little South African won his third British Open title, the jinx kept its grip.

The last time the championship was staged here was in 1969, when Britain's Tony Jacklin won it. Since then, it has gone around the big courses of England and Scotland, and Americans have chalked up an unbroken string of victories.

Now this taxing course of windswept sand and bushes has beaten the Americans again. Player won with a 72-hole total of 282, Britain's Peter Oosterhuis was second with 286, and Nicklaus, the best of the Americans, finished third at 287.

Johnny Miller, top money winner on the U.S. circuit this year, was one of the Americans whose hopes were shattered among the sandtraps of the inward nine holes. He finished 10th with 294.

"For Americans playing British courses, it is like rolling dice," Miller said. "You can roll them just right, but you don't know what numbers are coming up.

"I made four mistakes in my final round and every mistake cost me either a bogey or a double bogey."

It will be another five or six years before the Americans or anybody get another chance to play the Lytham and St. Anne's jinx.

Player, 37, the most convincing winner of the British Open for years, said the Americans should do better in the future because this championship is now played with a bigger-sized golf ball.

"All pros should play the big ball, even on long, tough and exposed courses like this one," Player said. "The Americans do—and that's why they're so good."

The big ball was used in the British Open for the first time, so Player made golfing history.

The South African never looked tired, even on the first two days when the wind howled and he had to hit his shots into the teeth of the storm.

After his victory, which was worth $13,200, Player claimed he has discovered the secret of concentration.

"I was able to get into a kind of shell, a state of hypnosis, in which all other things are shut out of my mind," Player said.

Jr. Babe Ruth All-Stars

All-Stars leading in district tourney

Sikeston's Jr. Babe Ruth All-Stars downed Tri- County 6-1 Saturday and rolled over Jackson 15-3 in the Jr. Babe Ruth All-Star tournament this weekend in Dexter.

With no losses, Sikeston plays Tuesday for the championship. Keller took the win Friday and Jackson won the mound in Saturday's action.

In other action Friday, East Prairie forfeited to Charleston and Tri- County defeated Dexter to move into the finals.

Charleston was eliminated Saturday when they fell to Illmo- Scott City.

The schedule for the remainder of the tournament: Today: Tri-County vs. Illmo- Scott City at 6:30 p.m.; Jackson vs. the winner at 9:00 p.m.

Tuesday: Sikeston vs. winner of today's last game at 6:20 p.m.

Niekro shuts out Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) Atlanta Braves hurler Phil Niekro believes a new twist to his pitching helped him lead his club to a five-hit, 7-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals here Sunday.

"I did something different against them in that game," said Niekro, who won his last game June 17 and who had been 7-10 against the Cards in his career.

"I threw my knuckleball underhand as well as from the other positions and I believe it helped me," he said. "They have always seemed to get a piece of the ball, hit and run a lot and use their speed against me.

"They don't strike out a lot and they make contact a lot. Whenever they make contact anything can happen. So I added the underhand knuckleball delivery and threw my fast ball, which was about 80 per cent of my pitches, from under there too," he said.

Niekro's strategy seemed to work as Cardinal hitters scattered their five hits through four innings, and never seriously threatened.

St. Louis pitcher Ray Bare had his first major league start spoiled early in the game as Ralph Garr hit his first pitch for a leadoff triple in the first inning and later scored on a wild pitch.

The Braves added another run in the first, two more in the third. Two walks and a three-run homer by Dave Johnson in the fifth inning clinched the Braves' victory and handed the Cardinals their eighth loss in their last nine games, knocking them out of a first-place tie in the National League's Eastern Division.

But Niekro's pitching kinks weren't the only twists in the game.

NFL strike going strong

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you're looking for a quick settlement to the football strike, maybe you'd better take another look.

The dispute between the National Football League Players' Association and the NFL Management Council is now in its third week, and the two sides do not appear to be any closer together today than when the strike officially started July 1. No progress in negotiations has been announced, and the two sides have not as much as agreed on a date for resuming talks.

The College All-Star Game, the annual summer fixture run by the Chicago Tribune Charities, was canceled due to the dispute, and the next casualty could be the July 27 Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio, which kicks off the exhibition season.

But most importantly, NFL veterans—and particularly the league's star players—appear to be quite solid in holding the union line. All around the country, as training camps open, NFLPA picket lines are being set up. And for the most part, the veterans are honoring those lines.

After meeting with both sides last Friday, federal mediator James Scearce said he would contact them again early this week to see if they want to resume negotiating.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, July 15, the 196th day of 1974. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, Italy declared war on Japan, its former Axis partner in World War II.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch artist, Rembrandt, was born in Leiden.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1789, France's King Louis XVI was awakened at 2 a.m. and told that his authority had collapsed with the fall of the Bastille in the French Revolution.

In 1918, in World War I, American troops attacked German positions at Chateau-Thierry in France.

In 1948, a Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia nominated President Harry S. Truman for a second term.

In 1958, President Dwight Eisenhower ordered 3,500 U.S. Marines to Lebanon during a Middle East crisis.

Ten years ago: The 28th Republican National Convention, meeting in San Francisco, nominated Barry Goldwater for President.

Five years ago: Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird said that in his opinion, the United States had "turned the corner" toward peace in Vietnam.

One year ago: Two Canadian officers of the International Control Commission in Vietnam were released after 17 days of detention by the Communists.

Thought for today: Let him that would move the world first move himself—Socrates, Greek philosopher, about 470-399 B-C.

Tax records may be needed again

ST. LOUIS — You filed your 1973 federal income tax return a while back now, so that's out of the way for another year.

But wait a minute! Where are your tax records?

Just as certain documents were essential in order to fill out Form 1040, they may well be necessary at some time in the future, the St. Louis district office of the Internal Revenue Service reminds people.

Obviously, if this year's tax return is selected by the Internal Revenue Service for an audit, those records will be needed to show how the apparently correct tax due was determined. Even if the return is accepted as filed, for peace of mind and good business practice all tax records should be kept as long as they remain useful.

The law specifies only that people must maintain records required to establish the correct amount of income, credits, deductions, and other matters to be reported on returns. This means that all information that will substantiate the items claimed on a tax return should be kept.

There is no requirement as to the particular kinds of records for tax purposes, other than that they be permanent, accurate and complete. However, it might pay to look over tax accounting methods, for no one should remain under the illusion that bits and pieces of paper thrown into a discarded shoe box can be considered proper records at tax time.

Records are required by law -- adequate records -- but good records should be required by you, the taxpayer, since frequently the difference between some documentation and good record- keeping is income tax savings.

The IRS recommends that all taxpayers carefully consider keeping track of such records as medical- care insurance premiums; cost of medicine and drugs; medical and dental expenses; state, local and property taxes; charitable contributions; interest and finance charges; disabled dependent andchild care; political contributions; business and educational expenses; on- business expenses, such as investment advice and publications; and reimbursements for casualty losses or thefts.

The length of time tax records should be kept varies, depending on the information documented. In general, records must be retained as long as their content may be magerial in the administration of any internal revenue law.

Receipts, canceled checks, and other records supporting a deduction, credit, expense, or itemm of income should be kept at least three years from the due date of the return or the date the tax is paid, whichever is later.

Record- keeping is important during these three years because under the law, the IRS can audit individual income tax returns three years back when errors are suspected.

There are other tax records that should be kept longer than three years. Records of how much is paid for a home and its major improvements, for example, should be maintained to establish a cost basis when selling the house.

Records of costs of any stock, bonds, or other investments should be retained indefinitely so gains or loss can be completed when selling. And records should be kept on any property received by gift or inheritance so that the owner may determine tax due if it is decided to sell some day.

Copies of previously filed tax returns should also be retained as a part of thee records. They help in preparing future tax returns as well as in such computations as filing a claim for refund or income averaging.

Employers get 2 months more to file forms

KANSAS CITY — Employers authorized to employ full - time students at subminimum wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act have been given an additional two months to file applications with the Kansas City Regional office of the Wage- Hour Division.

These include agricultural and retail or service establishments and institutions of higher education.

Doyle I. Loveridge, who heads the Employment Standards Administration in this region, explained that amendments of the act which went into force on May 1 originally allowed a grace period through June 30, permitting employers to hire students without waiting to complete and submit new forms. Because of the large number of applications still to be distributed, completed and acted on, the grace period has been extended to Aug. 31.

Loveridge reminded employers that employment of full - time students at subminimum wages befrore processing of a certificate application carries with the following certain conditions:

Full- time student employment not exceeding proportions permitted in the regulations.

Payment of not less than 85 per cent of the minimum wage applicable under the act.

Compliance with the requirements on permissible hours of employment, child labor, hazardous conditions and higher wage standards in other laws or in agreements.

Provision for payment of back wages to fulltime students if a certificate is denied or if employment during the grace period exceeds the finally authorized limit.

Employers or employes may get more detailed information from the local Wage-Hour Division offices in Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines, Wichita or Omaha. They are listed in the telephone directory under U. S. Government, Department of Labor.

BIG, BIGGER, BIGGEST, is how the progression goes, and this would appear to be about as far as it can go in tires. The four-ton, 12-foot-high monster, billed as the world's largest, is manufactured at Topeka, Kan., for use on a 200-ton truck requiring six.

Highlights & Sidelights

Petition bears 110,000 names

JEFFERSON CITY — The drive for petition signatures to put campaign reform before Missouri voters has been successful, says Frank E. Nutt, state chairman of Missourians for Honest Elections, which directed the bi-partisan petition effort.

Nutt said, "We will not be short of signatures. The petitions have been meticulously prepared. We read the law very closely and I think we ought to be completely safe."

Petitions bearing the names of almost 110,000 Missourians were submitted to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick at 3:05 p.m., July4. Kirkpatrick's staff will validate whether the signatures are those of registered voters and rule whether the petition has been written in accordance with state law.

Officials in Kirkpatrick's office said the lengthy process of checking signatures "will take at least several weeks."

The reform legislation, if passed by Missouri voters in November, will cover all candidates, including statewide, legislative, judicial, county, city, school or other political campaigns.

Candidates and committees acting for candidates must file statements on two dates prior to an election and on one date after an election. These statements must include loans, names of those contributing more than $25 and all campaign expenditures. Each candidate must list any business or investment in which he or she has a financial interest in excess of $1,000. Also, salaries, fees or retainers of more than $500 must be listed.

No anonymous contributions may be received for more than $5. No single contributor may put up more than $10,000 or 20% of a candidate's spending quota during a campaign. Banks, labor unions, trust companies and corporations are not allowed to contribute to political campaigns.

Statewide office candidates would be limited to expenditures of about $40,000. This is based upon $18 per hundred voters or $9 per hundred inhabitants in the state. Candidates for all other offices could spend $25 per hundred voters or $12 per hundred residents in their constituency.

A six- man bipartisan commission appointed by the governor would enforce the law. The commission would audit records, investigate alleged violations and bring legal action. Violation would be a misdemeanor with a fine of up to $5,000 or one year in prison. Also, candidates could be removed from the ballot if they conduct an illegal campaign.

Among the most controversial provisions of the proposed law is that which requires disclosure of a candidate's fees and retainers of over $500 received during the year prior to the election. Some lawyers and other professionals have said such disclosure will strain their relationships with clients.

Governor Christopher S. Bond, who is a lawyer, said such objections are "groundless". He added, "most large retainers are listed in Martindale- Hubble law director because law firms advertise themselves by disclosing major clients."

"If the petition has a flaw, it will not be difficult to get an amendment through the legislature," Bond said.

A petition opponent, Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, criticized the proposed reforms in a statement which said, "This language was designed to require lawyers who became candidates to disclose the names of their principal clients. Unfortunately, however, it goes a good deal further. A farmer who sold a brood cow with a calf at side would have to list the name of the purchaser together with the price of the cow and calf and the amount which was paid."

"The most interesting situation would exist in the case of a psychiatrist who might seek some non-paying public office as a matter of public service. If he was willing to offer himself for election as a member of the city council, school board, or board of trustees, it would be necessary for him to list the names of all persons to whom he had administered psychiatric treatment."

If the reform bill is passed by Missouri voters in November, it will be subject to legislative amendment like any other bill. Although several campaign reform bills were submitted in both the House and Senate, none were passed by legislators. Some legislators publicly criticized the reform plan petition so amendments may be forthcoming in the 1975 legislative session.

However, the success of the month- long petition drive may keep legislators from significantly altering the petition which stimulated exceptional voter interest throughout the state.

"This campaign has been remarkable," Nutt said. "People from all over the state wanted to sign. Our convassers said almost no one refused. Usually one person in every 20 or so will just walk away from a canvasser. Also, we didn't have to waste time with long, detailed explanations of the petition. The people want it."

Nutt said he had been told that such a petition campaign would cost at least $90,000, but that about $14,000 had been sufficient to finance the volunteer- dominated effort. "The money was almost all for telephones, paper and stationery," he said. "People donated almost everything else."

Another leader of the petition campaign, state Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, said, "I'm delighted with the effort. A lot of guys in Jefferson City said the people didn't care about campaign reform. The legislature had its chance last session and didn't make it. But I'm glad the people stood up and showed how they felt."

"There was opposition from organized labor and several state senators wrote letters against the petition. But I think an area like the 7th district around Springfield which got 17,000 signatures when it needed only 10,500 shows how the public feels about this issue."

Another legislator, Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, led efforts to check signature validity before petitions were submitted to the secretary of state.

"These are very clean petitions," Vossmeyer said. "We have varified close to 86,000 names and less than 5% have been scratched. Since we have from 35% to 100% over-runs in most districts we should be in very good shape."

The campgian reform proposal will appear on the November general election ballot if signatures equalling 5% of votes cast in the last presidential election in seven of the 10 Missouri congressional districts are validated.

The number of signatures collected in the seven districts in which the campaign was directed are:

First District, St. Louis, 12,209. Needed were 7,446.

Second District, St. Louis County: 20,880. Needed were 10,666.

Third District, St. Louis: 18,501. Needed were 9,127.

Fifth District, Kansas City: 11,383. Needed were 7,661.

Seventh District, Southwest Missouri: 18,125. Needed were 10,597.

Eighth District, Central Missouri: 13,812. Needed were 9,286.

Ninth District, North St. Louis County and Northeast Missouri: 14,893. Needed were 10,134.

"GOOD COMPANIONS" IN A FLOWER BED

Pictured above is a colorful bed of pink "carefree" geraniums and dusty miller planted in front as an edging. Geraniums are a magnificent display flower, liking full sun, and surviving a wide range of soil conditions — even poor soil. Both geraniums and dusty millers tolerate America's hot summers with ease and both are long lasting. Dusty miller has silvery foliage — an uncommon leaf color, and it provides a beautiful contrast with the dark, green handsomely zoned geranium leaves.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

"All the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish." (Ezekiel 17:24)

PRAYER: Give us, dear Lord, a divine sense of wonder and contentment in the simple expressions of Thy greatness and power. Amen.

Heavy drinking and smoking dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal report says moderate drinking may be beneficial to some people, but that heavy drinking and smoking combined greatly increases the risk of mouth and throat cancer.

"The wide range of devastating problems associated with the use of alcohol all relate to excessiveness—not moderation," said Dr. Morris E. Chafetz, director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

"This demands that we, as a society, begin to exercise a sufficient measure of individual and social responsibility in our use of beverage alcohol—a responsibility that has been seriously lacking."

The report was sent to Congress by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as Chafetz outlined its findings Wednesday to a White House seminar for health writers.

Cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx and esophagus and primary cancer of the liver "appear to be definitely related to heavy alcohol intake in the United States and parts of the world where these occur with high frequency in men," the report said.

It found that heavy drinkers and smokers run a 15-times greater risk of developing cancer of the mouth and throat than abstainers.

According to the report, moderate drinking is considered to be consumption of up to three ounces of whisky, a half bottle of wine or four glasses of beer daily.

Beyond that, a drinker runs nearly 2½ times greater risk of oral cancer, about the same as a person who smokes 40 or more cigarettes daily, the report said.

Chafetz said that for reasons unclear to researchers, the over-all risk of mouth and throat cancer is greatly compounded for people who both drink and smoke heavily.

However, he told the seminar: "There is no evidence that the moderate use of alcohol is harmful to health. Moderate drinkers, as a statistical- group, live longer than abstainers or ex-drinkers."

Chafetz said moderate drinkers have a lower rate of heart attacks and that "moderate alcohol use may be physically, psychologically and socially beneficial to active and institutionalized older people."

He emphasized the report does not contend that heavy drinking causes cancer, but said there is a clear statistical correlation between the two.

Chafetz said an increase in heavy teen- age drinking "just blows my mind. It worries me greatly."

Hot weather exhausts water

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — The mayor here says hot weather is exhausting the city's water supplies and residents might have to ration their water.

"Water supplies here have nearly reached a critical stage several times in recent weeks. This current heat wave that we are having isn't helping our water situation any," said Mayor Don Hoagland.

The present waterworks plant was built in 1906 and will be replaced next year by a $1-million plant now under construction.

"But that water plant is clearly a year away. Now we're bracing ourselves for this summer. If it is a long, hot one, we'll have to conserve," Hoagland said.

The mayor said he was concerned about rationing water.

"The minute you say ration or restricting, everyone runs in and fills up the bathtub and everything else they can find that holds water. But that doesn't solve the problem. It just complicates it," Hoagland said.

Single Swimming

Until 1901 in Great Britain, bathing beaches were segregated by sex. A Dorset proprietor was fined in 1873 for allowing a husband and wife to swim together.

State highway maps available free of charge

JEFFERSON CITY - Robert N. Hunter, Missouri Highway Departmentchief engineer, has reminded Missourians and out- of- state visitors of the availability of the 1974 official state highway map.

"With Missouri's tourist season now approaching its high-point," Hunter said, "it seems a good time to remind all motorists using Missouri's highways that the State Highway Department still has a good supply of the 1974 official state highway map."

Traditionally, the map has found some of its greatest use among tourists. This year is proving to be no exception to that rule, according to Hunter.

Although similar in style to the 1973 map, this year's version embodies numerous revisions. The highway department's planning division spent several months compiling and plotting data for it.

The map shows all highways in the 32,000 mile state system. It also includes separate inset maps for cities with populations of more than 20,000. Also included is an index for locating most of Missouri's other municipalities and towns, along with a listing of their populations. Another feature of the map locates Missouri's 36 state parks and lists the facilities available at each.

On the map, state parks and national forests are shaded green. Safety rest areas offering complete facilities are indicated by red triangles. Roadside parks are marked with a green tree symbol and historical markers are noted with a green dot.

A box is included giving addresses and phone numbers for the highways department's ten district offices and the state highway patrol's headquarters and nine troops.

The maps are free and are available through the highway department's Public Information Division in Jefferson City, the Tourist Information Center on Interstate 44 west of Joplin, and the highway department's ten district offices throughout the state.

The address of the district office serving the Sikeston and Southeast Missouri area is District 10, Missouri State Highway Department, Box 160, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

Windmills could be energy source

BOSTON (AP) — Sea breezes have better uses than sailing boats, flying kites and drying laundry, says a college professor. He has in mind giant windmills that would generate all New England's electricity.

"This is an energy resource that's right here in our front yard," says Prof. William E. Heronemus.

The front yard is New England's 473-mile coastline. And the resource is the wind that whistles up and down the coast at an average speed of 20 miles an hour.

If enough windmills were anchored off the coast, all the region's electricity could come from the air by the 1990s, he says. And it would only cost about three-fifths of what people are paying now.

The professor is a civil engineer at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst who specializes in alternate sources of energy.

Getting people to take the wind seriously has been a problem for Heronemus. Their skepticism starts to show when he tells them how many windmills it would take: 14,700 anchored off the coast at distances ranging from 12 to 200 miles from shore.

Each windmill would be a diamond shaped, lattice work mast rising 340 feet above the water. Each would hold three massive propellors 200 feet in diameter.

With 14,700 windmills outfitted with three propellors each, "that's 40,000 generators," Heronemous says. "I claim this is part of the reason for its success. You could set up a factory type of production that could get this down to a very, very reasonable cost."

He says his system could churn out 159 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year — four times as much as the six New England states used last year. And the load could be doubled without any problems, he says.

Heronemus says that there are technological questions about the scheme, but he says they can be worked out.

One is designing the propellors so they will turn easily and withstand hurricanes. Another is what to do when the wind is calm.

William Irving, director of research and environmental affairs for Boston Edison, said utilities are studying the uses of wind, and it might be a good source of electricity in the future. But right now, they are going ahead with a program to build nuclear power plants.

William Jones, a staff associate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Energy Laboratory, said generating electricity by wind is a definite possibility, but more money must be spent to work out the technology.

Educational training vital in state hospital program

FARMINGTON — People visiting Farmington State Hospital are often surprised to learn that many patients attend school while being treated for mental and emotional disorders. The school, however, is a vital adjunct to the hospital which serves the mental health needs of a 28 county area of southeast and south central Missouri.

The department is headed by Don Walker special education director, who supervises the work of certified classroom teachers, educational assistants and voctational education personnel.

It may be a child with a personality disorder or a middle- aged schizophrenic woman whose learning needs present special challenges to the staff of the education department. Approximately 80 patients, ranging in age from 12 to 64, are presently enrolled in some form of academic or vocational training in the hospital school.

According to the patient's needs, he is placed in a classroom situation, receives special tutoring, or is placed in a pre- vocational or vocational program. Also, at any given time there are several non- hospitalized students from the surrounding community attending classes geared to their special needs.

Within the multi- level structure of the school, appropriate facilities are available for specific needs. The teen- age "drop-out," for instance, receives remedial instruction and may be directed toward earning high school diploma equivalency rating. Other students receive help in learning problem areas, and adult basic education classes are conducted for mature patients.

Vocational education courses are offered in building and carpentry; automotive, body and small engine repair, sheet metal work and welding; fundamental skills in bookkeeping, typing, office machines and procedures; and preparation for careers in food service. A new category in the vocational education curriculum isa grounds and building maintenance course being staffed and set up in a former greenhouse on the hospital grounds.

Within the framework of the school's classroom and shop programs, many patients are receiving valuable assistance in developing academic and job skills which will help them cope in the competitive world outside the hospital walls.

SeMo State to get $6,000 grant

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $800,000 in federal funds will be distributed to 25 Missouri colleges for grants and loans to students in law enforcement.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is giving the money to the colleges for the 1975 fiscal year, according to Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

Long Life

A newly planted date palm tree will not bear fruit for about eight years and will not be fully mature until it is 30 years old. But the tree does not begin to decline until it is 100 years old and some have lived 200 years!

"Miracle Cure?"

5,000 YEAR OLD CHINESE HEALTH REMEDY FOUND

PEKING (Special)—Health researchers in China have uncovered an amazing rare old Chinese herb remedy that possesses spectacular healing qualities and reportedly has been used for 5,000 years to cure or give relief to a host of the most common illnesses suffered by mankind. Dramatic claims are being made that this "miracle herb" called ginseng may actually hold the key to a longer healthier life. Indeed, there is one historical case of a user living to be 256 years old.

Helps Many Illnesses

Like acupuncture, the many healing properties of this remarkable herb were once considered "folklore and superstition", but modern researchers around the world are suggesting that it may actually regulate many of the body's processes to increase SEXUAL potency, help heal ULCERS, relieve ARTHRITIS, check graying or loss of HAIR, improve DIGESTION, slow down ARTERIOSCLEROSIS, relieve ASTHMA, overcome FATIGUE, improve DIABETIC conditions, relieve inflammation of the URINARY TRACT, help chronic INSOMNIA, relieve BACKACHES and PAINS, and generally improve your health by increasing your body's potential to heal itself.

Safe, No Side Effects

Ginseng is not a drug, but an herb or vegetable that is extremely rich in vitamins and minerals. What's more, this amazing natural remedy is completely safe and non-toxic with no side effects. Unfortunately, high-grade ginseng is in short supply, and brokers and processors around the world are bracing themselves for a "run" on the market as the herb's purported "near miraculous" healing properties become more widely known to the general public.

Now Available in U.S.

Now you can get a generous 50-day supply of this amazing natural herb in capsule form direct from a major supplier by sending only $10.00 in check, cash or money order to Herbs, 309 N. Kings Rd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90048. This wonder herb is said to have helped millions of other people, and it may help your health problem too. Isn't it worth a try?

Greeks topple Cyprus leader

ATHENS (AP) — Greek army officers commanding the Cypriot National Guard have seized control of Cyprus and toppled the government of President Makarios, Radio Cyprus announced today. Reports differed on the fate of Makarios.

Radio Cyprus announced newspaper publisher Nicholas Sampson had been appointed president to succeed Makarios. Sampson publishes the newspaper Machi, meaning combat.

The radio earlier reported that Makarios had been killed but did not repeat this report in announcing the appointment of Sampson.

A Turkish Cypriot radio monitored in Ankara said Makarios had survived the coup and taken refuge with the United Nations force assigned to keep peace between Greeks and Turks on the island.

The Turkish broadcast said Makarios appealed to "all loyal Cypriots to struggle to end the foreign aggression in our homeland." It said he also sought United Nations intervention to halt "unnecessary bloodshed among brothers."

In Greece a military source said the Greece Armed forces had been put in a state of alert, and in Turkey Premier Bulent Ecevit canceled a trip to Turkey's Agean area and called an extraordinary cabinet meeting.

Ecevit declared Turkey "will not let any alien touch the Turkish community's basic rights on the island."

The Greek officers of the National Guard were recently accused by Makarios of supporting the terrorist Eoka-B organization, which seeks to unite Cyprus with Greece.

Union with Greece, or Enosis, had also been an early goal of Makarios, but he gave it up in favor of an independent Cyprus because of bitter opposition to Enosis by the island's large Turkish minority.

Makarios, 60, was the political leader for the island's struggle for independence from Britain in the 1950s and had been president since Cyprus became independent on Aug. 16, 1960. He had been archbishop and head of the Cypriot Orthodox Church since 1950.

Britain's high commissioner to Cyprus, Steven Olver, reported to London that the presidential palace in Nicosia was under attack, but "there is no confirmation on the whereabouts of President Makarios," a spokesman for the British Foreign Office reported.

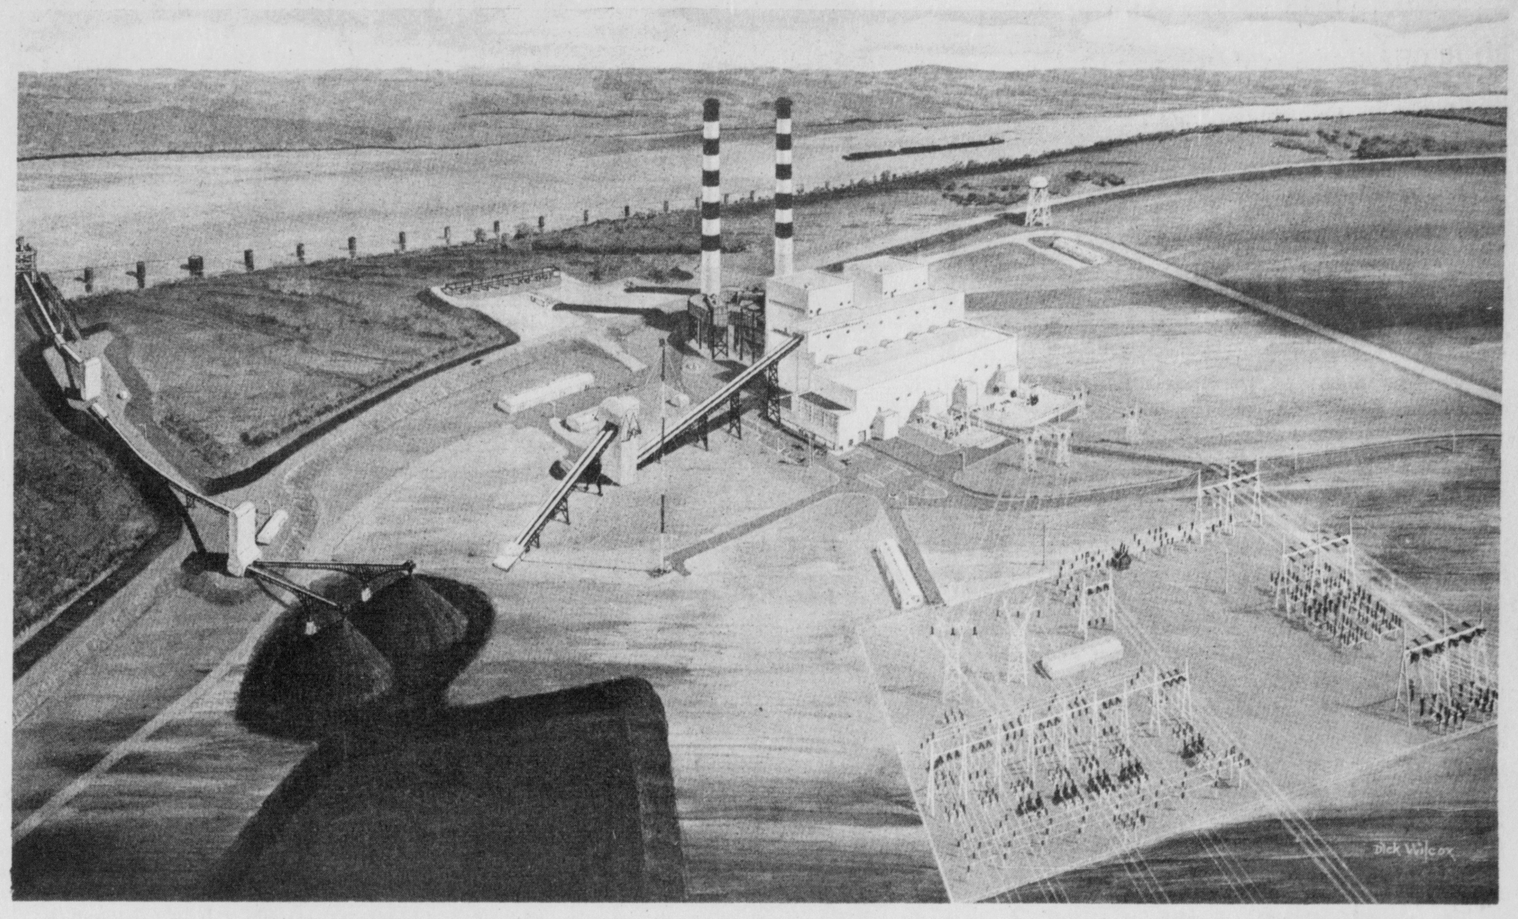
Olver reported that there was fighting in Nicosia, the nation's capital, and in Limassol. He said tanks had surrounded the Nicosia airport, and the rebel forces had taken over Radio Cyprus.

Normal communications with the Mediterranean island off the south coast of Turkey were severed, and the international airport at Nicosia was closed.

A communique broadcast by Radio Cyprus said the National Guard — the Cypriot army of 6,000 troops led by 650 Greek Army officers — had formed a "government of national salvation" and was in "full control of the situation." It said elections "for a genuinely freely elected government will be held within a year, no later."

It said Makarios was "already dead" and that anyone resisting the army would be "shot on the spot." It added that a curfew had been imposed and no civilians or vehicles other than ambulances were allowed on the streets.

Basic objectives were then listed, including "The continuation of formalities for the solution of the Cyprus problem through the intercommunal talks... The declaration of free elections as soon as the necessary preconditions are established, and, within a year, no later. ...Foreign policy will not be changed in any way. Friendly relations with other countries will be maintained..."



Generating unit to begin service in 1977

Associated Electric located in St. Jude Industrial Park near Marston, the generating and transmitting cooperative which supplies power for Noranda Aluminum Inc. is now constructing a second generating unit expected to go into service during the summer of 1977. An artist's conception of the completed rural electric cooperative, the largest known, illustrates the size of the plant upon completion. One of the 600 foot stacks near the plant, center, which principally emits water vapor, will not be included in the construction. The unit is being built by Blount Bros. Construction Co. of Montgomery, Ala.

1 killed and 18 injured in weekend mishaps

A 4 - year - old Corning, Ark., girl was fatally injured and 18 persons were injured in seven traffic accidents in the Bootheel area over the weekend, according to the highway patrol.

The fatality brings the number of traffic deaths in Southeast Missouri to 57 for the year compared with 58 persons killed in traffic accidents at this same time last year.

Gina Briney died at 8:50 p.m. Sunday in Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff of injuries received in a traffic accident two hours earlier on Highway 67 one mile south of Neelyville.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Bruce Edward Carlisle, 21, of Benton, Ark., made a left turn into oncoming traffic and was struck by a car driven north by the child's father, Donnie Ray Briney Sr., 33, of Corning, Ark.

Briney received minor injuries and his wife, Diane Briney, 30, and sons Donald Ray Briney Jr., 13 and John D. Briney, 11, suffered serious injuries. They were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Carlisle and passengers, Richard Perkins, 21, of Blakely, Ark., Tim Wommack, 21, of Camden, Ark., and Donald Lynn White, 21, of Benton, Ark., received minor injuries and were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Earl Baker, 47, of Sylvia was seriously injured at 6:30 p.m. Friday one mile south of Sylvia on Highway 67 when he lost control of his northbound car which slid across the highway down an embankment.

He was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Three persons were injured, two seriously, in a traffic accident at 12:05 a.m. Saturday on Highway 162 in Portageville when a southbound car driven by Arthur Muse Jr., 16, of Portageville failed to yield the right of way and was struck in the right side by a pickup truck driven east by Wesley Strickland, 54, of Lilbourn.

Strickland and a passenger, Terry Hunt, 15, of Portageville were seriously injured. Gail Cayton, 14, of Portageville, a passenger in the Muse auto, suffered

Thieves get $1,688 in goods

Burglars took items valued at $1,688 from the Grace Powell home, 527 Delmar St., between 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Saturday, according to police.

Police said a large number of items were taken from the house. Thieves apparently entered the house through a side door, police reported.

Burglars broke into Deal's Used Furniture, 865 W. Malone Ave., sometime Sunday and stole $45 worth merchandise, police said.

Taken were a guitar worth $50, a black tape box and an unknown number of tapes worth $45, according to police. Police said burglars got into the building through a rear window.

Pope Hunt, 1030 N. Ranney St., told police a gold diamond ring valued at $350 to $400 was lost or stolen between 2:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday at the Jaycee Swimming Pool.

Hunt told police he had a lifeguard put the ring in a basket for safekeeping with items belonging to other people. When he went to retrieve the ring, it was gone, he said.

No injury in 2-car accident

Four people escaped injury shortly after 9 a.m. today in a two- car accident two miles south of Bertrand on Route B. The accident occurred when a car driven by Mrs. Louise McClanahan of Bertrand pulled out of a side road, shown here, into the path of a car driven by Jerry Morris of East Prairie.The car in the foreground belongs to Morris. Mrs. McClanahan said the corn in the field blocked her view. She had two passengers in her car. (Daily Standard photo)

Consumers spending at high level locally

How are residents of Scott County using the bigger incomes they are now receiving? How much of it are they spending per year in local retail stores?

According to figures for the past year, which have just become available through a new market study, consumer outlays for goods and services were at a high level locally. To a great extent, however, it was a reflection of higher prices.

The findings are contained in a survey made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It shows how the average family in each part of the country has been spending its money and how much of it has been going for food, clothing, household equipment, cars and other articles.

In Scott County, food was a major item. Approximately 17 cents of every dollar was spent in the area's supermarkets, butcher shops, bakeries, grocery stores, delicatessens and the like.

The report shows that expenditures in local food stores in the year came to $14,597,000, as compared with the previous year's total of $13,277,000.

This was solely for food bought for home consumption. Not included was the sum spent in restaurants, at lunch counters and in other dine and drink places.

If the outlay for take-home food were to be divided equally among all local families, each of them would have a bill of $1,282 for the year.

Elsewhere in the central states, the average was $1,270 per family.

The figures for other retail lines also indicate relatively strong consumer buying locally.

Outlets for cars, motorcycles, trailers, boats and other automotive equipment had receipts totaling $21,295,000, as against the previous year's $18,087,000.

Sales of general merchandise, in variety and department stores, came to $5,013,000. In 1972 it was $4,391,000.

Stores carrying coats, dresses, shoes, hats and other wearing apparel reported a sales volume of $3,884,000, compared with the prior $3,551,000.

Furniture stores, including those selling home furnishings and appliances, accounted for $3,642,000. Their total, a year earlier, was $3,075,000.

Largest electric co-op in the works

MARSTON – Associated Electric, the generating and transmitting "super" cooperative located in St. Jude Industrial Park near here and the supplier of power for Noranda Aluminum Inc., is now constructing a second generating unit expected to go into service during the summer of 1977.

Associated Electric is one of a network of six cooperatives within the boundaries of Missouri which has a nationwide system. The company has approximately 220 miles of 345,000 volt lines which tie into a system connecting Tulsa, Okla., Kansas City, St. Louis and Minneapolis - St. Paul, Minn. Associated provides service for 40 of the 41 electric cooperatives in Iowa and has the ability to exchange emergency energy, economy energy, short-term power and other types of power.

The activities of Associated are directed from Springfield, including the electrical supply operations. A modern energy control center, equipped with a digitial computer, effects operational economics and provides continous analysis of the security of the transmitting system.

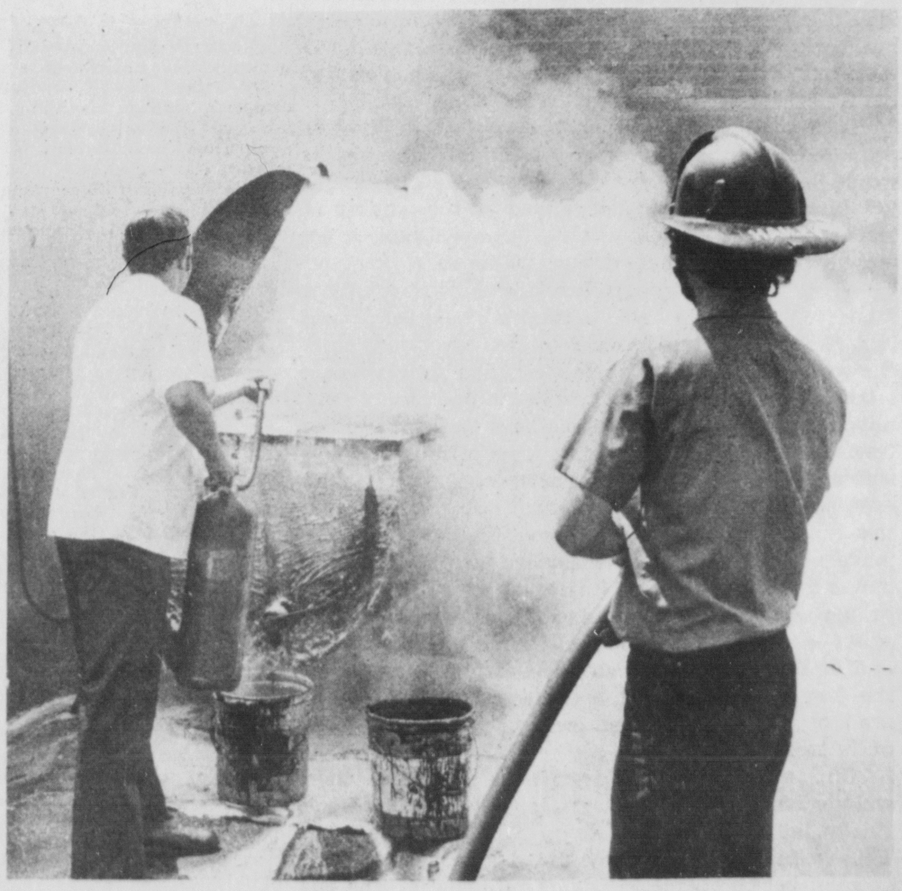
The new unit will be of the same capacity as the present generating plant, a 600,000 kilowatt unit with a maximum capability of 672,000 kilowatts. The twin unit will have transmitting lines approximately 300 miles long and when both units are complete, the 1,200,000 kilowatt plant will be the largest electric cooperative known.

The new generating unit under construction required the largest loan program ever put together by rural electric cooperatives. The plant and transmission lines loans amount to $240 million.

Unite one is located on a 200 acre site with approximately 100 full time employes. Approximately 300 construction personnel are employed at unit two but employment will peak to 900 persons.

Unit two is being constructed by Blount Bros. Construction Co. of Montgomery, Ala.

Charles Price of Malden is plant superintendent.



Roofing tar overheats

Fire Chief Larry Linnemeyer, left, uses a fire extinguisher on a vat of roofing tar which overheated and caught fire about 11:30 a.m. today behind the Scott County Welfare Office, 312 E. Center. Fireman Jim Hailey stands by after using the hose on the vat. The equipment belonged to Carr Roofing.

THE UNITED BROTHERHOOD OF HONEY DIPPERS, SEAT HOLE CUTTERS, PRIVY BUILDERS AND HELPERS. O.U.K: B.V.D.

This story relates to an organization in the country of Acirema years before the rapid trend to new inventions had started.

This brotherhood was not only quite militant but also exclusive. No ordinary worker was usually accepted and most of the members were descendants of a long line of honey dippers, the trade being handed down from father to son. Acirema had many zany laws. It was unlawful for a group of businessmen to organize in order that they might gig their customers, but it was perfectly legal for workers to do so. While the privy builders, strictly speaking, were businessmen, if they considered themselves as workers by combining with their employees they could get exemption from this law of monopoly.

The brotherhood, in addition to a high wage, had also been able to coerce many added benefits for themselves such as extra- long paid vacations; multiple pay for work after hours, week-ends, and holidays; large pensions when they thought they were old enough to stop working. In fact, as the saying went "You had it made when you joined the Honey Dippers."

As the organization would not permit any privies in all Acirema to be either built or serviced by other than its members, their wage rates and earnings became the highest of any craftsmen in the land. Not only were they able to get a high wage, but had added benefits that were not subject to income taxes and they were known as "welfare." Welfare was not to benefit the outhouse owner who made it, but a super payment to the honey dippers. At first the owner of every privy had to pay a fee of a few centoras into this welfare fund for every bushel of waste removed. The fee was increased until it amounted to several goldoras (ACIREMA money) and was actually greater than the wage itself.

The high cost of Outhousery was irritating the people and in trying to solve the problem indoor plumbing was proposed as a solution. To try and stop this "new fangled" idea, the brotherhood brought out high- powered public relation talent to try to deride it. Statements were publicized such as "who would want either to eat or to sleep in the same building with their sanitary facilities?" In fact, those who tried this first were made to feel so small they could crawl thru the hole in the doughnut the atoms had for breakfast. But ridicule could not compete with the apparent advantages of the new system. Those who had it soon realized the convenience of not having to go outside in snow, rain, and bad weather or in the middle of the night, with perhaps some prying neighbor looking to see just what type of rainment you might wear at this time of day, the type people did not see on the wash line. It was also hard on those who liked to sleep in the "raw" but felt compelled to dress for these nocturnal excursions.

Just as the buggy whip makers had at first laughed at the horseless carriage and believed the horse was irreplaceable until finally replaced with horsepower, the brotherhood made the same mistake, and indoor plumbing with the advent of larger towns and beginning of cities took more and more of the business. Work was becoming harder and harder to find and the ranks of the unemployed brethren became larger and larger. At this time some of the politically minded officials, seeking their votes, conceived the idea that, as the honey dippers were willing to work but it was not available, they should be paid longer and longer at taxpayers' expense for not working. This was known as workless recompense.

To try to stimulate this business a subsidy was proposed for those still willing to build outhouses. It would pay part of the cost outright and lend the rest at low interest. The subsidy depended on the number of seats in the privy and also whether a conventional or the more expensive key- hole design was used.

When this did not produce the desired results, a retaining program at taxpayers' expense was inaugurated. But this brought serious objections from the workers. Many complained they had spent years in learning to advance from a honey dipper to a seat-hole cutter. Why should a man have to learn another trade and, on top of this, hadn't some of those workers actually gone to school for an entire eight years before even starting to work? Just how much could you in this modern age expect a person to do in order to make a living? Didn't people realize just how difficult it was to master the use of a coping or scroll saw and proper use of a plane and sand paper to smooth the edges so people would not get splinters? Why, hadn't one of their members made the startling invention of the key hole, which had become the mark of status used by all the affluent citizens of Acirema in their outhouses?

But unemployment payments, subsidies, their welfare fund, retraining programs were of no avail and finally the trade and profession completely died out. The welfare plan gradually faded away as its bank account became depleted paying out benefits. The sale of various property acquired under the plan did not bring enough goldoras to fill the need. The hammer, saw, and nail appliers were replaced by a new line of craftsmen - ones using the wrench, blow torch, lead, iron, and copper pipe. The skill of cutting a key hole was replaced by that of wiping a joint, caulking a flange, and cutting a thread.

Sufficient time has not passed so "history" can assess whether the indoor- plumbing craftsmen had enough foresight to keep from duplicating the mistakes of their predecessors. Or the people of Acirema enough intelligence to keep them from doing so. Maybe costs of indoor plumbing finally would become so high that new methods and inventions would someday also be sought. And would chemistry, the science of the atom, or some as yet unknown inventive genius arise to protect the Aciremans from the self- seeking of this new trade?

But there were still a few folks around who reminisced about the old days, and when they went to some far- off places they even found remnants of this bygone art.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

While AFL-CIO President George Meany doesn't apologize for the slogan, "veto-proof Congress," which has caused criticism of its inference, he insists it simply means majority rule rather than a rubber stamp for labor's wishes.

To further back up this reaction to labor leaders' power, the new survey by Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, N. J., reports that some 70 per cent of the American voting- age public (that's 95 million people) favor voluntary unionism, favor curbs on union political spending and think union officials already have far too much power. The study, recently released in Washington, shows that:

--By a margin nearly four- to - one (70 per cent versus 19 per cent) Americans think there is "too much power concentrated in the hands of labor leaders of the big unions in this country."

--By a margin of more than six-to-one (79 per cent versus 12 per cent) Americans feel union officials should not be permitted to use compulsory union dues and fees "to campaign for political candidates." Significantly, 78 per cent of all union members share this view. Pending campaign reform legislation does not outlaw the use of compulsory union dues for politics.

--By a margin of more than two- to - one (68 per cent versus 27 per cent) American voters feel every citizen should be able to "hold a job whether or not he belongs to a union."

Federal labor law endorses and promotes compulsory unionism, but gives individual states the option to ban such arrangements.

While the margins in favor of voluntarism in the 1974 ORC survey are larger than ever, this raises a disturbing question: If the American people favor voluntary unionism and want Congress to curb union political spending abuses, why do the federal lawmakers refuse? Why, in fact, are they on the verge of enacting a one-sided "campaign reform" bill that will curb the political influence of every special interest group except the bosses of Big Labor?

The failure of Congress to act on legislation curbing the abuses of power by union officials is an example of a small but powerful minority -- the officials of Big Labor -- dictating terms to the very men and women who are elected to represent all Americans. No wonder that many Americans have lost faith in their government.

Isn't it time for a change?

SEWERS GO DOWN THE DRAIN?

Only those who have never been there was nostalgic over the kerosene- lamp and outhouse days when every home was pretty much self-contained and self- sufficient. But we may be heading toward something reminiscent of that kind of individual family independence as our demands for energy and other amenities begin to strain the ability of public utilities to meet them.

In many areas, new developments have been stalled because of the lack of sewer tie-ins and treatment plants. An article in PUD (Planned Unit Development) Review, published in Reston, Va., predicts that in the not distant future, we have to be largely a "sewerless" society.

The technology exists today to provide, at feasible cost, human waste disposal systems within single- family or multi- family structures.

One of the most promising is a self- contained system developed in Sweden. The Multrum unit requires no energy and produces no pollutants. Waste is "composted" in a sealed container in the basement, and after two years the sterile residue is simply removed to the garden.

A sewerless society would not only greatly reduce the pollution of lakes and streams, but according to one estimate would mean a 45 per cent reduction in the consumption of purified water used to flush toilets.

Another expert predicts that by 1980, solar- powered home air- conditioning units will be commonplace. The growing use of air conditioners is one of the major causes of the electrical "brown-outs" some cities have experienced in recent summers.

These are signs and portents, suggesting that when we talk about the nation becoming energy- independent, we are talking about more than immunity from foreign oil embargoes.

ENERGY IS LIFE

Alaska has estimated undeveloped reserves of natural gas of over 325 trillion cubic feet. The contribution this vast reservoir of natural gas can make toward easing the threat of a genuine energy shortage in the lower 48 states is crucial. But oil and gas production go together. "... it is impossible", says an American Gas Association official, "to produce the gas without first producing the oil. And the only economical way to produce the oil is to have the pipeline to transport it to the southern coast of Alaska, where it can be shipped to markets."

The imperative of developing new gas supplies was emphasized by an A.G.A. spokesman when he said, "Natural gas is more popular than ever, yet the increase in gas sales during 1971 was the smallest since World War II. This is largely because new supplies of gas are not being developed fast enough to meet rapidly increasing demands." Two changes are needed. In the first place, those concerned with the environment must recognize that natural gas, one of the "clean" sources of energy, is an important factor in pollution abatement. Secondly, no time can be wasted in providing necessary incentives for producers to speed the exploration required to step up development of tremendous gas reserves yet to be discovered in the U. S. -- reserves that are said to total more than 1,100 trillion cubic feet -- including those in Alaska.

One hard fact to which everyone must soon awaken is that energy is life despite all academic arguments to the contrary. Therefore, the question of adequacy of energy supplies has become a personal problem to which each citizen must address himself with increasing concern.

IS NO NEWS BETTER THAN BAD NEWS?

Ten years ago, in a unanimous decision, the U. S. Supreme Court enunciated a doctrine which in the view of some critics, granted virtual immunity from the libel laws to newspapers.

The court ruled that a public official could not recover damages for defamatory statements about his official conduct unless it could be proved that they were made with actual malice or with the knowledge that they were false or with "reckless disregard" for their truth or falsity.

Today, journalists are concerned that this right of "uninhibited, robust and wide-open" debate on public issues, to use the words of Associate Justice William J. Brennan, is in danger of being nibbled away by a less liberal bench.

The Supreme Court has agreed to review a case arising under a Florida law which requires newspapers to print rebuttals from people about whom they published adverse stories or comments. The fear is that, should the Florida statute be upheld, it would encourage similar laws in other states, or possibly a federal "right to reply" law which the Nixon administration intends to submit to Congress.

Even should all this come true, however, the press would still have one option that those who believe it needs "curbing" or who tend to blame it for the bad news it reports, might bear in mind.

That kind of self- imposed news boycott by editors will never happen, of course. It would be damaging to the integrity of the press as it would be the public interest.

But if the public really wants a press that plays it safe — that asks, "How will this story or this editorial affect us?" rather than, "Do the people have a right to this information" — that could be what it ends up with.

MORE U.S. AID FOR THE SOVIET UNION?

One of the most important issues being debated in this session of Congress is the extent to which the Administration will be allowed to continue its policy of aid and trade with Soviet Russia. Several Congressmen have introduced legislation to curb this aid which has so endangered our national security.

The Kremlin has asked Boeing, Lockheed and McDonnell- Douglas, the only three companies in the world that produce long- range, wide-bodies jets, to collaborate in the construction of a huge aircraft factory for the Soviet Union.

The aircraft produced would be 60 percent faster, carry 25 percent more, and fly 20 percent farther than the 747 jet. This one plant would produce as many jumbo jets as are produced in all U.S. plants put together.

The U.S. has also been supplying computer technology to the Soviets. A collaboration between U.S. computer companies and the Soviet Union to build ultra-modern, high- speed computers is now in the offing. This computer technology would not only move the Soviets ten years into the future, but also enormously upgrade their military across the board. Our citizens should support all Congressional efforts to stop such aid for our sworn enemy. HLH

Sinatra and the Socialists: Australian Unions Set World Precedent With Swiftly Triggered Political Strikes

NEW YORK -- I'm sorry Frankie blew his wig in Australia. I've always pitied Sinatra. He was a good newspaper copy boy but turned to crooning. He was a ukelele- picking street ainger in Dockside Hoboken (N.J.) and became a star. And he's been running since -- not so much from us newsmen but from the shadows of the combine: the late mass killer Lucky Luciano; the dead Profacci, a real don of dons in Brooklyn; the bullet-in- the- head vegetable Joe Colombo, Sr.; the self- exiled Chicago syndicate boss Sam (Momo) Giancana; the old Atlantic City hoods and so, so many others. Frankie is a "money- maker," in their lingo, and never will they cease haunting him.

Frankie never should have lost his cool. And as chairman of the Freedom of the Press Committee of the Overseas Press Club, I doth protest the snaring venom he spat at the Aussie press.

But this isn't a psyche-probe into whether Frankie Sinatra fears most his receding hairline or the hoodlums. Scatological though he was in his blasts on newspeople and tube "journalists," there's a far more important story buried in the Melbourne confrontation.

There's a major principle here, wrapped up in what his attorney, Milton Rudin, said after Sinatra was virtually locked in his hotel room by Australian labor leaders.

"We are astounded that the decision of a few union leaders can apparently deprive a man of his living, can stop him leaving a country, or possibly even stop him being fed," averred the counselor.

This riposte came after the militantly raucous Robert Hawke, president of the Australian Council of Trade Unions (similar to the AFL-CIO), announced that Sinatra would "never get out of the country." And Richard Hill, head of the Melbourne Theatrical Employees Union, ordered his members to strike against Sinatra and thus prevent the singer from fulfilling four remaining concert dates down under.

And Mark Windrum, chief of the Melbourne Transport Workers Union, directed his followers not to refuel or load Sinatra's private jet plane unless the "Rat Pack" leader apologized to the Australian press.

Further, the service employes at the Southern Cross Hotel, members of the hotel local there, were told not to serve Sinatra with food and drink nor to clean his suite.

Finally, Jim North, Secretary (leader) of the New South Wales Division, Australian Journalists Association, angrily announced that "if Sinatra doesn't apologize to the media I will call on 114 affiliated unions and ask them to blackball Sinatra unless he apologizes for calling our women journalists whores."

Thus lawyer Rudin was right. Sinatra was being struck and imprisoned for what he said. He was foul- mouthed. But that doesn't give the labor leaders the right to "withdraw their labor" from him professionally. Nor to lock him in Australia.

There's a principle here as big as Sinatra's hysterical mouth. The Australian unions, many of them way out ideologically, translate their political and personal sentiments into trade union action. It is the same Bob Hawke who a year ago called for a worldwide "embargo on transport, goods and communications" if France continued her nuclear bomb testing in the South Pacific.

This was not a call for boycotting of French products. That's the Aussie's privilege. It was, however, a politicalized decision made to prevent a sovereign nation from pursuing its own policies on its own territories over international waters.

Hawke called on the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU), based in Brussels, to unleash similar boycotts of French ships, aircraft and communications. If the ICFTU, a Socialist- oriented world federation, had followed Hawke it could have crippled France for a while.

Hawke did convince 35 Australian unions to boycott the French.

Hawke has not ignored the U.S. His waterfront affiliates threatened, and then actually began action, to tie up American flag ships in protest against Washington's policy in Southeast Asia.

This could have spread. But Teddy Gleason, president of the American International Longshoremen's Assn., got off some counterthreats -- warning that no Australian cargo would be handled in scores of American ports, if the Aussies struck our ships. That ended it.

Hawke has also sounded off against Peking. He protested, and then threatened action, against the mainland Chinese because they set off a nuclear explosion.

Mark well this politicalization of trade unionism. It's characteristic of militant unionism across the world. Be it Sinatra or atomic bomb tests, or aid to Saigon or American multinational corporations, the Hawkes of the international labor world watch them closely. When their feelings are hurt or their own political or philosophical positions are crossed, they yell strike. Yes, indeed, the issue is far bigger than the crooner's mouth.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS

Colson on Tape

WASHINGTON — In an ironic twist, the White House's high priest of snoopery, Charles Colson, was himself recently bugged as he uttered some of the Watergate scandal's most indiscreet confessions.

Colson, when he was the top White House hatchet man, was fond of flipping a switch and tape recording friends and enemies alike. A few days before he went to prison for obstructing justice, however, he was secretly recorded as he bared his soul to Washington businessman and sometime private eye Richard Bast.

Colson had come to Bast to interest him in investigating the Central Intelligence Agency which Colson felt had set him up for all his troubles with federal prosecutors. We have now heard the taped conversations.

The White House tapes were marred by the clatter of cups, the shuffling of paper and the President whistling jocular tunes. Bast's hidden microphones picked up the buzzing of bees, barking dogs and the clink of glasses filled with Johnnie Walker Black Label.

Unaware of the turning reels, Colson speculated that the Central Intelligence Agency planned a "Seven Days in May" takeover of the government. He also asserted that the Pentagon practiced extortion to keep President Nixon from arresting military men who stole his secrets.

In sometimes hostile, sometimes contrite language, Colson described President Nixon behind his back as being short on "guts." Behind Colson's back, Nixon had been equally critical of Colson, the White House tapes show.

Colson complained to Bast that the President was always on the verge of coming down hard on the CIA. But, Colson groused, Nixon was talked out of it by presidential staff chief Al Haig who feared it would "take down the whole intelligence community."

"That's where I got to be critical of Tricky Dick with this kind of lack of guts here," commented the tough-talking Bast.

Sadly, Colson agreed: "I criticize him along with you. For that reason."

Beside Bast's swimming pool whose fountain made background water music over a "mike" secreted among poolside flowers, the two men discussed how Nixon could rid himself of CIA and military spying on the White House.

"He's got the message," brooded Colson. "And he's thinking about it. He's got a helluva problem ... Nobody understands this ... He can't do it himslelf." Colson explained that Nixon could not fully trust anyone in the White House to carry out his orders and "he can't just sit in there with a machine gun."

The skeptical Bast asked why Nixon didn't simply order arrests if his National Security Council was being spied on by the military, as recent testimony has confirmed.

"If he tried to do anything about it," sighed Colson, "they would have disclosed a lot of his documents that he was worried about protecting, that they had been stealing ... right from Kissinger's briefcase."

"In other words," replied Bast, "they practiced extortion on him."

"Subtly," agreed Colson.

"And the President let them get away with it?"

"Yeah," the former White House confidant conceded.

As to the CIA, Colson said that one of its former agents, Howard Hunt, while in the White House, was in contact directly or indirectly with CIA clandestine bigwigs.

Colson said he never knew whether the CIA infiltrated the White House "to knock (Nixon) off" -- figuratively speaking -- "or whether they were in their just to spy ..."

"Maybe they were trying to pull something similar to a 'Seven Days in May' deal (a fictional military coup)," suggested Bast.

"Could have been, could have been," mused Colson. "I can't say there was a conspiracy to do it, but I will say that was the practical consequence of their actions."

Nixon's theory, said Colson, was that the CIA were coming in to spy ... Who knows what they want ... The whole house of cards collapsed and maybe that's what they wanted.

"Right now the frightening thing is that there is no one controlling the CIA. I mean nobocy ... Their own files hang them high as a kite."

Colson exictedly rustled a document from his briefcase and said, "Look at this thing." As he described it to the unseen mike and a tape recorder slipped under a mulch bag, it was a note he had written after visiting Senate Watergate cochairman Howard Baker, R-Tenn. Baker had given him quotes from a secret CIA memo.

According to Colson's notes, the CIA memo admitted CIA involvement in some aspects of Watergate. Colson said he had scarcely believed Baker would let him see it. "I thought Howard Baker was drunk," he marveled -- a charge Baker's office hotly dismisses, saying Baker only quoted from the memo while questioning Colson, but did not let him read it.

"Why doesn't Nixon declassify these things?" asked Bast.

Colson explained: "The problem is if he gives this up, how does he justify not giving up other things he doesn't want to give up?" This, of coures, is now the President's dilemma before the Supreme Court.

Another consideration, grumbled Colson, was that Haig (who Colson suspected was with the CIA) had convinced the President not to wreck the CIA just "to save (himself) from impeachment."

"They play it with violins," observed Bast of such White House intrigues.

"People still dance to it," said Colson.

"And here you have the President of the United States dancing to that," replied Bast acidly.

Footnote: Haig told us there was "no way" he was working for the CIA, but refused comment on his talks with Colson. The CIA denies it was spying on the White House. Colson has said that Bast violated a confidence in releasing the tapes. However, the tapes show Colson gave him full permission to speak of their talks, provided it came after Colson's sentencing.

Senate Watergate Committee is dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee, which exposed the dimensions of the nation's greatest political scandal, is dead.

The seven-man panel — officially named the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities — expired over the weekend with the release of its 2,215-page final report detailing "one of America's most tragic happenings."

The mountains of documentary and testimonial evidence collected during the committee's 16 months of active investigation have been stored on computer tape and willed to the panel's principal survivors — the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry and the Special Watergate Prosecution Force.

The aftermath of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate, the committee said, was "characterized by corruption, fraud and abuse of official power."

As preventive medicine, the members unanimously recommended a massive overhaul of federal election laws, creation of a permanent independent prosecutor's office and specific limits on a president's power to violate a citizen's privacy without due process.

Norris injured while working on automobile

Wiley Samuel Norris, 24, of 510 S. Frederick St., Cape Girardeau was struck by an automobile and injured at 6:55 p.m. Saturday at the corner of Greer and Elm streets.

Police said Norris was opening the radiator cap on his automobile when the hot water squirted out and he jumped to get out of the way. He jumped into the path of a car driven by Jo Ann Rodgers, 729 Delmar St.

He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital where he was treated for multiple bruises and released.

Wiley's car was parked on Greer Street and Mrs. Rodgers was westbound on Greer at the time of the accident.

Explorer presidents to meet

Plans for the President's Association Conference on Exploring scheduled Sept. 20-22 in Kansas City will also be discussed.

Burning trash ignites lumber

CHARLESTON — Firemen were called at 5:30 p.m. Friday to Furniture City on West Marshall Street.

Lumber piled near the rear of the building was ignited by burning trash according to Fire Chief Joe Johnson who said no damage to the building was reported.

At 11:40 a.m. Saturday the fire department was called to the E.B. Drinkwater residence, 314 East Commercial St.

Shingles on the roof of the home which was being re-roofed were ignited from an undetermined source. A small hole was burned in the roof.

Decision on gas rate hike expected soon

JEFFERSON CITY — A hearing before the Missouri Public Service Commission on a request by Arkansas - Missouri Power Co., to raise its rates to residential customers of Associated Natural Gas Co. concluded its third day of testimony July 12.

The request is for an interim rate increase of 17 per cent until the commission can make a determination on a request for a permanent increase. A decision will probably be made in the next two to three weeks, according to Lewis Blanton of Sikeston, who attended the hearing as city attorney for the city of Chaffee.

The cities of Sikeston, Chaffee, Kennett and East Prairie are opposing any increase saying the increases are not needed and the cost of Ark-Mo facilities in Arkansas not attached to Associated Natural Gas such as a liquified natural gas plant, are being passed on to Associated customers.

Frank G. Smith, of Blytheville, Ark. president of Ark-Mo, said the company is having to lay off employes and is not performing some functions it should perform because of lack of revenue.

During the testimony, however, it was said Ark-Mo paid its parent company Middle South Utilities, $1,00,000 in dividends and plans to pay the same amount in 1974.

Ann Landers

Mr. Success is failure in homelife

Dear Ann Landers: You've printed several letters about workaholic husbands. May I add a comment based on many years of experience? I am married to one.

Like those who are driven to excesses in eating and drinking, the person who is driven to overwork may be using his "industriousness" as an excuse to hide from something. In my husband's case, he is hiding from me and his children.

Mr. Success finds it infinitely safer and more comfortable to stay in his structured work role. Members of his immediate family demand something from him in terms of emotional output. At work he doesn't have to be bothered with relating to people in a meaningful way. At the office he can hide behind his mahogany desk and fancy title. This man even avoids social functions because he is so unsure of himself. He is a prominent member of the community, knows a great many people, but he has no friends.

If you look at my husband's bank statements, his stock portfolio, and his performance in the businessworld, he's unquestionably a star, but if you examine his role as a husband and father, he's a dismall failure. I'm not bitter -- I'm just on to him. -- His Wife

Dear Wife: Thanks for a real zinger. And now that you're "on to him", why don't you get on to yourself? You ARE bitter or you could never have written that letter. I'm not suggesting that the man doesn't deserve every word you laid on him, but for your own sake, lady, talk to a counselor and unload some of that hostility and anger. Your husband will never change, which I'm sure you know. My guess is that you have the guy pegged perfectly. So now, get some help for yourself so you can accept, in your guts, his personality defects or make other living arrangements.

Dear Ann Landers: In the past, our criminal justice system has been oriented almost exclusively toward the criminal: law enforcement, apprehension, trial, conviction and, hopefully, rehabilitation. The only thing the innocent victim of a violent crime got out of the system was a trip to a hospital in an ambulance, and the victim had to pay for the ride.

A small but growing group of states has acted to correct this gross injustice. My own state, Washington, now has an excellent program to compensate and assist innocent victims. (So does your state, Illinois.) other states with such programs include Hawaii, Alaska, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts.

These programs cannot be successful, however, if the citizens don't know they exist. Will you help us spread the word by letting your readers know that compensation and assistance may be available to victims of violent crimes, upon application to their state crime victims' compensation board or division? Thank you for passing the word. -- Calvin Winslow, Administrator

Dear Calvin: Your letter has made it possible for 54 million citizens to know these laws exist in some states. Thank you for educating a large segment of our society.

And now may I say a word to my readers who don't know if their state has such laws? Please write to your state representative and ask him. If you don't know the name of your state representative, telephone the public library. The librarian will tell you, if you will give him (or her) your address.

Inform your state representative that you WANT this law passed and be sure to let him know you are a constituent. Nothing is so important to a politician as the people who decide whether or not the remains in office.

Tourist camp site sought for visitors

Frank Randol of Glaveston, Tex., spent the weekend in Sikeston.

The Standard wishes to compliment Miss Katherine Clark on her music furnished at the picture show. She gives very pleasing interpretations to all plays thrown on the screen and if Miss Vera Brinkoff should drop in some evening, she would be proud of her understudy.

Sikeston has been in need of a good and convenient tourist camp because we are frequently visited by tourists from all over the country. The Fair Grounds were considered the best and most convenient place in our city. Bath houses, rest rooms and ovens are to be built. A small variety store and soft drink stand are also to be installed for the benefit of the travelers.

New Madrid — Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Thornton of San Antonio, Tex., accompanied by the latter's nephew, Master Bill Wilkinson of Blytheville, Ark., arrived in New Madrid last Friday on a visit to Mrs. Thornton's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Griffith of this city.

What's the law?

The case of the delicate bartender

By: JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Cuddles was a fizzical culturist. She was a lady bartender but, it didn't look like she was going to be one for long. A city ordinance was passed that prohibited females from being bartenders.

Taking up the cudgels, Cuddles sought to protect the prerogatives of her sex by attacking the legality of the ordinance in court.

"It's perfectly valid," insisted a city attorney. "Under it's police power, a city has a duty to protect the health, welfare and morals of its citizens. And, since drinking makes strange bar fellows, passing out the booze is no job for a lady. Simply, she's too tender to be a bartender."

"When I want a knight in shining armor to protect me," retorted Cuddles, "I'll let him know. In the meanwhile, I have the same right to be employed behind a bar in a respectable joint as any man. And to deny me that right is pure discrimination."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you invalidate the ordinance and put Cuddles back behind the bar?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that Victorian ideas as to women and their proper place in the scheme of things have changed. In light of current customs and mores, blanket restrictions against female bartendering may no longer be viewed as a necessary and reasonable exercise of police power. If in these enlightened days women can congregate and be served in bars, concluded the judge, in effect, there is no reason to preclude them from serving up the drinks.

Crime rate soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crime in the United States soared up 15 per cent during the first three months of this year, the FBI reported today.

It was the second consecutive period reflecting a dramatic increase in the national rate of murder, rape, robbery, assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft — the crime categories measured by the FBI in its Uniform Crime Reports.

The latest crime surge strengthened the pattern forecast by the 16 per cent over-all increase during the last three months of 1973. By contrast, the full-year figures for 1972 showed a 4 per cent decline, the first drop in 17 years, and the figures for the first nine months of 1973 showed the crime rate was holding steady.

The FBI figures, based on statistics reported by state and local police agencies across the country, are not considered totally accurate by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration which has concluded from its own polling that the nation experiences at least twice as much crime as the FBI figures reflect.

The FBI report showed that offenses in all seven crime categories totaled 15 per cent more than in the same period a year ago.

Broken down by categories, the largest increase was 19 per cent for larceny, followed by 15 per cent for burglary and 10 per cent for rape. Murder and assault each rose 7 per cent, auto theft 5 per cent and robbery 1 per cent.

In the brakdown by population, the sharpest increases were in communities of less than 10,000 where the biggest surge was 33 per cent for murder.

Only cities of more than one million showed any significant crime decrease. Taken together, big cities reported an 8 per cent decline in robbery, a 4per cent drop in assault, and a 5 per cent decrease in motor vehicle thefts.

Black superstars make movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What happens when black superstars band together to make a film? They are misunderstood, asserts comedian Bill Cosby.

The film is "Uptown Saturday Night," and it stars Sidney Poitier, Cosby, Harry Belafonte, Flip Wilson, Richard Pryor, Calvin Lockhart, Roscoe Lee Browne, Paula Kelly and others.

Poitier put the project together and directed it for First Artists, in which he is a partner with Barbra Streisand, Steve McQueen, Dustin Hoffman and Paul Newman.

"Uptown Saturday Night" opened to excellent business in New York and Chicago, but some of the reviews have been dismaying.

"As black film makers, we are subject to a condition in which things get pushed out of proportion," Cosby observed.

"In the first place, this is not a black film made by blacks for black audiences. We are Americans, and we made the picture to be seen and enjoyed by Americans."

Cosby was especially piqued by criticisms that "Uptown Saturday Night" repeated the old movie stereotype of eye-bugging by black comics.

"The color of the skin of a black man," said the comedian in a pedagogical manner, "gives more prominence to the whiteness of the eyes than does the pinkish tinge of the white man's skin.

"Watch George Segal or Jack Nicholson or Walter Matthau or Jack Lemmon when they are doing comedy and you will note that their eyes do indeed bug out. It is only natural in comedy to open your eyes wider."

"Nobody talks about a 'white movie.' But whenever blacks do a film, the critics ask 'Is it a black movie? Is it real?

State auditor sends claim to federal agency

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri State Auditor John D. Ashcroft has completed and sent to the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration the audit of the disaster claim submitted by the Chaffee Special Road District in Scott County.

Ashcroft's office, through an agreement between the Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP) and the State of Missouri, is auditing throughout the state as a result of last year's floods and high winds.

The Chaffee Road District submitted a claim of $2,579.01 for expenditures incurred in performing approved work. Ashcroft's audit recommends a reimbursement of $2,488.01 as approved under the guidelines of the Federal - State Disaster Assistance Agreement. However, the audit comments on the additional work performed and recommends that OEP make a final determination of the amount eligible for reimbursement.

OPE retains final review and approval authority, but cannot make reimbursements until the completed work has been audited by Ashcroft's office.

Strikes hit airline and copper industry

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

National Airlines and the copper industry were hit by strikes today, but a tentative settlement was reached in the lengthy walkout by garbagemen and other city employes in Baltimore.

A union spokesman said neogotiators would recommend approval of the offer to 3,000 striking Baltimore employes, some of whom have been off the job since July 1. A separate dispute involving city police remained unsettled with the issue of reprisals the main stumbling block.

The National Airlines strike involved mechanics. In the copper industry, workers walked out on four major producers in a dispute that threatened to involve 30,000 industry employes. Prison guards and other workers picketed a dozen state facilities in Ohio, with employes at some state liquor stores vowing to join the job action.

The dispute between the National Football League Players Association and the NFL Management Council involving players' rights entered its third week with no settlement in sight. The College All-Star game already has been canceled due to the dispute and the next casualty could be the July 27 Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio, which begins the exhibition season.

Able declined to discuss the details of either offer, saying they would first be annnounced to the union membership.

Elsewhere, shipworkers, miners, autoworkers and bus drivers were involved in labor disputes — most of them centered on monetary issues.

Player won't strike

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Veteran linebacker Larry Stallings has refused to honor pickets set up by the National Football League Players Association and has entered the St. Louis Cardinals training camp here.

Stallings, who said he feared some demands made by the association would hamper coaches' and management's efforts to establish team discipline, also said he was reluctant to do anything that might cause problems on the team later.

"I respect the decision reached by my fellow players who decided to honor the strike," Stallings said Sunday, "and I hope they respect my right to do what I felt was proper."

The pickets were set up at the opening of training camp Sunday on the campus of Illinois State University by 15 Cardinal veterans led by player representative Dan Dierdorf. Team officials and Dierdorf agreed that the picketing was peaceful.

Dierforf, who met informally for about an hour with the 44 rookies and free agents at the camp, said he had no direct complaints about the Cardinal management but that he was concerned with the way players were handled in the league.

The player representative said he told the new players that they needed a signed collective bargaining agreement to assure their rights as players and employes.

Americans are jinxed

LYTHAM ST. ANNE'S, England (AP) — This place is not very popular with American golfers. It has one of the most famous seaside courses in the world, but no American has won the British Open Championship here for 48 years.

When Jack Nicklaus failed to catch Gary Player Saturday, and the little South African won his third British Open title, the jinx kept its grip.

The last time the championship was staged here was in 1969, when Britain's Tony Jacklin won it. Since then, it has gone around the big courses of England and Scotland, and Americans have chalked up an unbroken string of victories.

Now this taxing course of windswept sand and bushes has beaten the Americans again. Player won with a 72-hole total of 282, Britain's Peter Oosterhuis was second with 286, and Nicklaus, the best of the Americans, finished third at 287.

Johnny Miller, top money winner on the U.S. circuit this year, was one of the Americans whose hopes were shattered among the sandtraps of the inward nine holes. He finished 10th with 294.

"For Americans playing British courses, it is like rolling dice," Miller said. "You can roll them just right, but you don't know what numbers are coming up.

"I made four mistakes in my final round and every mistake cost me either a bogey or a double bogey."

It will be another five or six years before the Americans or anybody get another chance to play the Lytham and St. Anne's jinx.

Player, 37, the most convincing winner of the British Open for years, said the Americans should do better in the future because this championship is now played with a bigger-sized golf ball.

"All pros should play the big ball, even on long, tough and exposed courses like this one," Player said. "The Americans do—and that's why they're so good."

The big ball was used in the British Open for the first time, so Player made golfing history.

The South African never looked tired, even on the first two days when the wind howled and he had to hit his shots into the teeth of the storm.

After his victory, which was worth $13,200, Player claimed he has discovered the secret of concentration.

"I was able to get into a kind of shell, a state of hypnosis, in which all other things are shut out of my mind," Player said.

Jr. Babe Ruth All-Stars

All-Stars leading in district tourney

Sikeston's Jr. Babe Ruth All-Stars downed Tri- County 6-1 Saturday and rolled over Jackson 15-3 in the Jr. Babe Ruth All-Star tournament this weekend in Dexter.

With no losses, Sikeston plays Tuesday for the championship. Keller took the win Friday and Jackson won the mound in Saturday's action.

In other action Friday, East Prairie forfeited to Charleston and Tri- County defeated Dexter to move into the finals.

Charleston was eliminated Saturday when they fell to Illmo- Scott City.

The schedule for the remainder of the tournament: Today: Tri-County vs. Illmo- Scott City at 6:30 p.m.; Jackson vs. the winner at 9:00 p.m.

Tuesday: Sikeston vs. winner of today's last game at 6:20 p.m.

Niekro shuts out Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) Atlanta Braves hurler Phil Niekro believes a new twist to his pitching helped him lead his club to a five-hit, 7-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals here Sunday.

"I did something different against them in that game," said Niekro, who won his last game June 17 and who had been 7-10 against the Cards in his career.

"I threw my knuckleball underhand as well as from the other positions and I believe it helped me," he said. "They have always seemed to get a piece of the ball, hit and run a lot and use their speed against me.

"They don't strike out a lot and they make contact a lot. Whenever they make contact anything can happen. So I added the underhand knuckleball delivery and threw my fast ball, which was about 80 per cent of my pitches, from under there too," he said.

Niekro's strategy seemed to work as Cardinal hitters scattered their five hits through four innings, and never seriously threatened.

St. Louis pitcher Ray Bare had his first major league start spoiled early in the game as Ralph Garr hit his first pitch for a leadoff triple in the first inning and later scored on a wild pitch.

The Braves added another run in the first, two more in the third. Two walks and a three-run homer by Dave Johnson in the fifth inning clinched the Braves' victory and handed the Cardinals their eighth loss in their last nine games, knocking them out of a first-place tie in the National League's Eastern Division.

But Niekro's pitching kinks weren't the only twists in the game.

NFL strike going strong

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you're looking for a quick settlement to the football strike, maybe you'd better take another look.

The dispute between the National Football League Players' Association and the NFL Management Council is now in its third week, and the two sides do not appear to be any closer together today than when the strike officially started July 1. No progress in negotiations has been announced, and the two sides have not as much as agreed on a date for resuming talks.

The College All-Star Game, the annual summer fixture run by the Chicago Tribune Charities, was canceled due to the dispute, and the next casualty could be the July 27 Hall of Fame Game in Canton, Ohio, which kicks off the exhibition season.

But most importantly, NFL veterans—and particularly the league's star players—appear to be quite solid in holding the union line. All around the country, as training camps open, NFLPA picket lines are being set up. And for the most part, the veterans are honoring those lines.

After meeting with both sides last Friday, federal mediator James Scearce said he would contact them again early this week to see if they want to resume negotiating.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, July 15, the 196th day of 1974. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, Italy declared war on Japan, its former Axis partner in World War II.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch artist, Rembrandt, was born in Leiden.

In 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

In 1789, France's King Louis XVI was awakened at 2 a.m. and told that his authority had collapsed with the fall of the Bastille in the French Revolution.

In 1918, in World War I, American troops attacked German positions at Chateau-Thierry in France.

In 1948, a Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia nominated President Harry S. Truman for a second term.

In 1958, President Dwight Eisenhower ordered 3,500 U.S. Marines to Lebanon during a Middle East crisis.

Ten years ago: The 28th Republican National Convention, meeting in San Francisco, nominated Barry Goldwater for President.

Five years ago: Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird said that in his opinion, the United States had "turned the corner" toward peace in Vietnam.

One year ago: Two Canadian officers of the International Control Commission in Vietnam were released after 17 days of detention by the Communists.

Thought for today: Let him that would move the world first move himself—Socrates, Greek philosopher, about 470-399 B-C.

Tax records may be needed again

ST. LOUIS — You filed your 1973 federal income tax return a while back now, so that's out of the way for another year.

But wait a minute! Where are your tax records?

Just as certain documents were essential in order to fill out Form 1040, they may well be necessary at some time in the future, the St. Louis district office of the Internal Revenue Service reminds people.

Obviously, if this year's tax return is selected by the Internal Revenue Service for an audit, those records will be needed to show how the apparently correct tax due was determined. Even if the return is accepted as filed, for peace of mind and good business practice all tax records should be kept as long as they remain useful.

The law specifies only that people must maintain records required to establish the correct amount of income, credits, deductions, and other matters to be reported on returns. This means that all information that will substantiate the items claimed on a tax return should be kept.

There is no requirement as to the particular kinds of records for tax purposes, other than that they be permanent, accurate and complete. However, it might pay to look over tax accounting methods, for no one should remain under the illusion that bits and pieces of paper thrown into a discarded shoe box can be considered proper records at tax time.

Records are required by law -- adequate records -- but good records should be required by you, the taxpayer, since frequently the difference between some documentation and good record- keeping is income tax savings.

The IRS recommends that all taxpayers carefully consider keeping track of such records as medical- care insurance premiums; cost of medicine and drugs; medical and dental expenses; state, local and property taxes; charitable contributions; interest and finance charges; disabled dependent andchild care; political contributions; business and educational expenses; on- business expenses, such as investment advice and publications; and reimbursements for casualty losses or thefts.

The length of time tax records should be kept varies, depending on the information documented. In general, records must be retained as long as their content may be magerial in the administration of any internal revenue law.

Receipts, canceled checks, and other records supporting a deduction, credit, expense, or itemm of income should be kept at least three years from the due date of the return or the date the tax is paid, whichever is later.

Record- keeping is important during these three years because under the law, the IRS can audit individual income tax returns three years back when errors are suspected.

There are other tax records that should be kept longer than three years. Records of how much is paid for a home and its major improvements, for example, should be maintained to establish a cost basis when selling the house.

Records of costs of any stock, bonds, or other investments should be retained indefinitely so gains or loss can be completed when selling. And records should be kept on any property received by gift or inheritance so that the owner may determine tax due if it is decided to sell some day.

Copies of previously filed tax returns should also be retained as a part of thee records. They help in preparing future tax returns as well as in such computations as filing a claim for refund or income averaging.

Employers get 2 months more to file forms

KANSAS CITY — Employers authorized to employ full - time students at subminimum wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act have been given an additional two months to file applications with the Kansas City Regional office of the Wage- Hour Division.

These include agricultural and retail or service establishments and institutions of higher education.

Doyle I. Loveridge, who heads the Employment Standards Administration in this region, explained that amendments of the act which went into force on May 1 originally allowed a grace period through June 30, permitting employers to hire students without waiting to complete and submit new forms. Because of the large number of applications still to be distributed, completed and acted on, the grace period has been extended to Aug. 31.

Loveridge reminded employers that employment of full - time students at subminimum wages befrore processing of a certificate application carries with the following certain conditions:

Full- time student employment not exceeding proportions permitted in the regulations.

Payment of not less than 85 per cent of the minimum wage applicable under the act.

Compliance with the requirements on permissible hours of employment, child labor, hazardous conditions and higher wage standards in other laws or in agreements.

Provision for payment of back wages to fulltime students if a certificate is denied or if employment during the grace period exceeds the finally authorized limit.

Employers or employes may get more detailed information from the local Wage-Hour Division offices in Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines, Wichita or Omaha. They are listed in the telephone directory under U. S. Government, Department of Labor.

BIG, BIGGER, BIGGEST, is how the progression goes, and this would appear to be about as far as it can go in tires. The four-ton, 12-foot-high monster, billed as the world's largest, is manufactured at Topeka, Kan., for use on a 200-ton truck requiring six.

Highlights & Sidelights

Petition bears 110,000 names

JEFFERSON CITY — The drive for petition signatures to put campaign reform before Missouri voters has been successful, says Frank E. Nutt, state chairman of Missourians for Honest Elections, which directed the bi-partisan petition effort.

Nutt said, "We will not be short of signatures. The petitions have been meticulously prepared. We read the law very closely and I think we ought to be completely safe."

Petitions bearing the names of almost 110,000 Missourians were submitted to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick at 3:05 p.m., July4. Kirkpatrick's staff will validate whether the signatures are those of registered voters and rule whether the petition has been written in accordance with state law.

Officials in Kirkpatrick's office said the lengthy process of checking signatures "will take at least several weeks."

The reform legislation, if passed by Missouri voters in November, will cover all candidates, including statewide, legislative, judicial, county, city, school or other political campaigns.

Candidates and committees acting for candidates must file statements on two dates prior to an election and on one date after an election. These statements must include loans, names of those contributing more than $25 and all campaign expenditures. Each candidate must list any business or investment in which he or she has a financial interest in excess of $1,000. Also, salaries, fees or retainers of more than $500 must be listed.

No anonymous contributions may be received for more than $5. No single contributor may put up more than $10,000 or 20% of a candidate's spending quota during a campaign. Banks, labor unions, trust companies and corporations are not allowed to contribute to political campaigns.

Statewide office candidates would be limited to expenditures of about $40,000. This is based upon $18 per hundred voters or $9 per hundred inhabitants in the state. Candidates for all other offices could spend $25 per hundred voters or $12 per hundred residents in their constituency.

A six- man bipartisan commission appointed by the governor would enforce the law. The commission would audit records, investigate alleged violations and bring legal action. Violation would be a misdemeanor with a fine of up to $5,000 or one year in prison. Also, candidates could be removed from the ballot if they conduct an illegal campaign.

Among the most controversial provisions of the proposed law is that which requires disclosure of a candidate's fees and retainers of over $500 received during the year prior to the election. Some lawyers and other professionals have said such disclosure will strain their relationships with clients.

Governor Christopher S. Bond, who is a lawyer, said such objections are "groundless". He added, "most large retainers are listed in Martindale- Hubbie law director because law firms advertise themselves by disclosing major clients."

"If the petition has a flaw, it will not be difficult to get an amendment through the legislature," Bond said.

A petition opponent, Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, criticized the proposed reforms in a statement which said, "This language was designed to require lawyers who became candidates to disclose the names of their principal clients. Unfortunately, however, it goes a good deal further. A farmer who sold a brood cow with a calf at side would have to list the name of the purchaser together with the price of the cow and calf and the amount which was paid."

"The most interesting situation would exist in the case of a psychiatrist who might seek some non-paying public office as a matter of public service. If he was willing to offer himself for election as a member of the city council, school board, or board of trustees, it would be necessary for him to list the names of all persons to whom he had administered psychiatric treatment."

If the reform bill is passed by Missouri voters in November, it will be subject to legislative amendment like any other bill. Although several campaign reform bills were submitted in both the House and Senate, none were passed by legislators. Some legislators publicly criticized the reform plan petition so amendments may be forthcoming in the 1975 legislative session.

However, the success of the month- long petition drive may keep legislators from significantly altering the petition which stimulated exceptional voter interest throughout the state.

"This campaign has been remarkable," Nutt said. "People from all over the state wanted to sign. Our convassers said almost no one refused. Usually one person in every 20 or so will just walk away from a canvasser. Also, we didn't have to waste time with long, detailed explanations of the petition. The people want it."

Nutt said he had been told that such a petition campaign would cost at least $90,000, but that about $14,000 had been sufficient to finance the volunteer- dominated effort. "The money was almost all for telephones, paper and stationery," he said. "People donated almost everything else."

Another leader of the petition campaign, state Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, said, "I'm delighted with the effort. A lot of guys in Jefferson City said the people didn't care about campaign reform. The legislature had its chance last session and didn't make it. But I'm glad the people stood up and showed how they felt."

"There was opposition from organized labor and several state senators wrote letters against the petition. But I think an area like the 7th district around Springfield which got 17,000 signatures when it needed only 10,500 shows how the public feels about this issue."

Another legislator, Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, led efforts to check signature validity before petitions were submitted to the secretary of state.

"These are very clean petitions," Vossmeyer said. "We have varified close to 86,000 names and less than 5% have been scratched. Since we have from 35% to 100% over-runs in most districts we should be in very good shape."

The campgian reform proposal will appear on the November general election ballot if signatures equalling 5% of votes cast in the last presidential election in seven of the 10 Missouri congressional districts are validated.

The number of signatures collected in the seven districts in which the campaign was directed are:

First District, St. Louis, 12,209. Needed were 7,446.

Second District, St. Louis County: 20,880. Needed were 10,666.

Third District, St. Louis: 18,501. Needed were 9,127.

Fifth District, Kansas City: 11,383. Needed were 7,661.

Seventh District, Southwest Missouri: 18,125. Needed were 10,597.

Eighth District, Central Missouri: 13,812. Needed were 9,286.

Ninth District, North St. Louis County and Northeast Missouri: 14,893. Needed were 10,134.

"GOOD COMPANIONS" IN A FLOWER BED

Pictured above is a colorful bed of pink "carefree" geraniums and dusty miller planted in front as an edging. Geraniums are a magnificent display flower, liking full sun, and surviving a wide range of soil conditions — even poor soil. Both geraniums and dusty millers tolerate America's hot summers with ease and both are long lasting. Dusty miller has silvery foliage — an uncommon leaf color, and it provides a beautiful contrast with the dark, green handsomely zoned geranium leaves.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

"All the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish." (Ezekiel 17:24)

PRAYER: Give us, dear Lord, a divine sense of wonder and contentment in the simple expressions of Thy greatness and power. Amen.

Heavy drinking and smoking dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal report says moderate drinking may be beneficial to some people, but that heavy drinking and smoking combined greatly increases the risk of mouth and throat cancer.

"The wide range of devastating problems associated with the use of alcohol all relate to excessiveness—not moderation," said Dr. Morris E. Chafetz, director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

"This demands that we, as a society, begin to exercise a sufficient measure of individual and social responsibility in our use of beverage alcohol—a responsibility that has been seriously lacking."

The report was sent to Congress by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as Chafetz outlined its findings Wednesday to a White House seminar for health writers.

Cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx and esophagus and primary cancer of the liver "appear to be definitely related to heavy alcohol intake in the United States and parts of the world where these occur with high frequency in men," the report said.

It found that heavy drinkers and smokers run a 15-times greater risk of developing cancer of the mouth and throat than abstainers.

According to the report, moderate drinking is considered to be consumption of up to three ounces of whisky, a half bottle of wine or four glasses of beer daily.

Beyond that, a drinker runs nearly 2¼ times greater risk of oral cancer, about the same as a person who smokes 40 or more cigarettes daily, the report said.

Chafetz said that for reasons unclear to researchers, the over-all risk of mouth and throat cancer is greatly compounded for people who both drink and smoke heavily.

However, he told the seminar: "There is no evidence that the moderate use of alcohol is harmful to health. Moderate drinkers, as a statistical- group, live longer than abstainers or ex-drinkers."

Chafetz said moderate drinkers have a lower rate of heart attacks and that "moderate alcohol use may be physically, psychologically and socially beneficial to active and institutionalized older people."

He emphasized the report does not contend that heavy drinking causes cancer, but said there is a clear statistical correlation between the two.

Chafetz said an increase in heavy teen- age drinking "just blows my mind. It worries me greatly."

Hot weather exhausts water

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — The mayor here says hot weather is exhausting the city's water supplies and residents might have to ration their water.

"Water supplies here have nearly reached a critical stage several times in recent weeks. This current heat wave that we are having isn't helping our water situation any," said Mayor Don Hoagland.

The present waterworks plant was built in 1906 and will be replaced next year by a $1-million plant now under construction.

"But that water plant is clearly a year away. Now we're bracing ourselves for this summer. If it is a long, hot one, we'll have to conserve," Hoagland said.

The mayor said he was concerned about rationing water.

"The minute you say ration or restricting, everyone runs in and fills up the bathtub and everything else they can find that holds water. But that doesn't solve the problem. It just complicates it," Hoagland said.

State highway maps available free of charge

JEFFERSON CITY - Robert N. Hunter, Missouri Highway Departmentchief engineer, has reminded Missourians and out- of- state visitors of the availability of the 1974 official state highway map.

"With Missouri's tourist season now approaching its high-point," Hunter said, "it seems a good time to remind all motorists using Missouri's highways that the State Highway Department still has a good supply of the 1974 official state highway map."

Traditionally, the map has found some of its greatest use among tourists. This year is proving to be no exception to that rule, according to Hunter.

Although similar in style to the 1973 map, this year's version embodies numerous revisions. The highway department's planning division spent several months compiling and plotting data for it.

The map shows all highways in the 32,000 mile state system. It also includes separate inset maps for cities with populations of more than 20,000. Also included is an index for locating most of Missouri's other municipalities and towns, along with a listing of their populations. Another feature of the map locates Missouri's 36 state parks and lists the facilities available at each.

On the map, state parks and national forests are shaded green. Safety rest areas offering complete facilities are indicated by red triangles. Roadside parks are marked with a green tree symbol and historical markers are noted with a green dot.

A box is included giving addresses and phone numbers for the highways department's ten district offices and the state highway patrol's headquarters and nine troops.

The maps are free and are available through the highway department's Public Information Division in Jefferson City, the Tourist Information Center on Interstate 44 west of Joplin, and the highway department's ten district offices throughout the state.

The address of the district office serving the Sikeston and Southeast Missouri area is District 10, Missouri State Highway Department, Box 160, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

Windmills could be energy source

BOSTON (AP) — Sea breezes have better uses than sailing boats, flying kites and drying laundry, says a college professor. He has in mind giant windmills that would generate all New England's electricity.

"This is an energy resource that's right here in our front yard," says Prof. William E. Heronemus.

The front yard is New England's 473-mile coastline. And the resource is the wind that whistles up and down the coast at an average speed of 20 miles an hour.

If enough windmills were anchored off the coast, all the region's electricity could come from the air by the 1990s, he says. And it would only cost about three-fifths of what people are paying now.

The professor is a civil engineer at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst who specializes in alternate sources of energy.

Getting people to take the wind seriously has been a problem for Heronemus. Their skepticism starts to show when he tells them how many windmills it would take: 14,700 anchored off the coast at distances ranging from 12 to 200 miles from shore.

Each windmill would be a diamond shaped, lattice work mast rising 340 feet above the water. Each would hold three massive propellors 200 feet in diameter.

With 14,700 windmills outfitted with three propellors each, "that's 40,000 generators," Heronemous says. "I claim this is part of the reason for its success. You could set up a factory type of production that could get this down to a very, very reasonable cost."

He says his system could churn out 159 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year — four times as much as the six New England states used last year. And the load could be doubled without any problems, he says.

Heronemus says that there are technological questions about the scheme, but he says they can be worked out.

One is designing the propellors so they will turn easily and withstand hurricanes. Another is what to do when the wind is calm.

William Irving, director of research and environmental affairs for Boston Edison, said utilities are studying the uses of wind, and it might be a good source of electricity in the future. But right now, they are going ahead with a program to build nuclear power plants.

William Jones, a staff associate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Energy Laboratory, said generating electricity by wind is a definite possibility, but more money must be spent to work out the technology.

Educational training vital in state hospital program

FARMINGTON — People visiting Farmington State Hospital are often surprised to learn that many patients attend school while being treated for mental and emotional disorders. The school, however, is a vital adjunct to the hospital which serves the mental health needs of a 28 county area of southeast and south central Missouri.

The department is headed by Don Walker special education director, who supervises the work of certified classroom teachers, educational assistants and voctational education personnel.

It may be a child with a personality disorder or a middle- aged schizophrenic woman whose learning needs present special challenges to the staff of the education department. Approximately 80 patients, ranging in age from 12 to 64, are presently enrolled in some form of academic or vocational training in the hospital school.

According to the patient's needs, he is placed in a classroom situation, receives special tutoring, or is placed in a pre- vocational or vocational program. Also, at any given time there are several non- hospitalized students from the surrounding community attending classes geared to their special needs.

Within the multi- level structure of the school, appropriate facilities are available for specific needs. The teen- age "drop-out," for instance, receives remedial instruction and may be directed toward earning high school diploma equivalency rating. Other students receive help in learning problem areas, and adult basic education classes are conducted for mature patients.

Vocational education courses are offered in building and carpentry; automotive, body and small engine repair, sheet metal work and welding; fundamental skills in bookkeeping, typing, office machines and procedures; and preparation for careers in food service. A new category in the vocational education curriculum isa grounds and building maintenance course being staffed and set up in a former greenhouse on the hospital grounds.

Within the framework of the school's classroom and shop programs, many patients are receiving valuable assistance in developing academic and job skills which will help them cope in the competitive world outside the hospital walls.

SeMo State to get $6,000 grant

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $800,000 in federal funds will be distributed to 25 Missouri colleges for grants and loans to students in law enforcement.

"Miracle Cure?"

5,000 YEAR OLD CHINESE HEALTH REMEDY FOUND

PEKING (Special)—Health researchers in China have uncovered an amazing rare old Chinese herb remedy that possesses spectacular healing qualities and reportedly has been used for 5,000 years to cure or give relief to a host of the most common illnesses suffered by mankind. Dramatic claims are being made that this "miracle herb" called ginseng may actually hold the key to a longer healthier life. Indeed, there is one historical case of a user living to be 256 years old.

Helps Many Illnesses

Like acupuncture, the many healing properties of this remarkable herb were once considered "folklore and superstition", but modern researchers around the world are suggesting that it may actually regulate many of the body's processes to increase SEXUAL potency, help heal ULCERS, relieve ARTHRITIS, check graying or loss of HAIR, improve DIGESTION, slow down ARTERIOSCLEROSIS, relieve ASTHMA, overcome FATIGUE, improve DIABETIC conditions, relieve inflammation of the URINARY TRACT, help chronic INSOMNIA, relieve BACKACHES and PAINS, and generally improve your health by increasing your body's potential to heal itself.

Safe, No Side Effects

Ginseng is not a drug, but an herb or vegetable that is extremely rich in vitamins and minerals. What's more, this amazing natural remedy is completely safe and non-toxic with no side effects. Unfortunately, high-grade ginseng is in short supply, and brokers and processors around the world are bracing themselves for a "run" on the market as the herb's purported "near miraculous" healing properties become more widely known to the general public.

Now Available in U.S.

Now you can get a generous 50-day supply of this amazing natural herb in capsule form direct from a major supplier by sending only $10.00 in check, cash or money order to Herbs, 309 N. Kings Rd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90048. This wonder herb is said to have helped millions of other people, and it may help your health problem too. Isn't it worth a try?
